CITY BEEF JUMPS 10 CENTS

Victoria consumers were struck with a 10-cent-a-pound increase for all prime beef cuts this week.

One wholesaler predicts that beef prices could rise as much as 40 per cent in the next two months.

The price of poultry also is soaring. Victoria housewives caught in the price squeeze can take comfort from what is being handed Vancouver consumers. There, the price of steak has jumped as much as 30 cents a pound in some cases.

Of Victoria meat outlets checked today, one had raised the price of porterhouse steak from $2.39 to $2.49 a pound, the price of ground beef from 92 to 95 cents a pound, and stewing beef from $1.23 to $1.29 a pound.

A check with a Vancouver outlet showed a rise from $2.49 to $2.79 for porterhouse steak, a rise from 88 cents to $1 for ground beef and a rise of 13 cents for stewing beef, now selling at $1.25.

Wholesaler Dennis Wheldon says the crux of the problem of soaring beef prices is that not enough cattle are being raised to meet the demand.

Wheldon and meat retailer Garry Williams agreed that switching from beef to pork could help keep family budgets in line.

Williams said centre-cut loin pork had dropped from $1.69 to $1.49 a pound.

Fuel Exports To U.S. Up 32%

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Canada's exports of energy materials to the United States during the first three months of the year were 32 per cent higher than in the same period last year, statistics Canada reported Tuesday.

Exports of energy materials to the United States totalled $395.1 million during the first quarter of 1972 and $521.4 million during the first quarter of 1973.

Statistics Canada attributed the increase to growing U.S. energy needs and reported it was led off by a 37 per cent increase in the value of crude oil shipments to the U.S.—an increase in value of $89 million.

The other major increase in exports of energy materials reported by Statistics Canada for the first quarter was a doubling in volume of coal exports to Japan from 1.5 million tons during the first quarter of 1972 to about three million tons during the first three months of the current year.

There was a significant drop in Canada's imports of crude oil, natural gas, other fuels and electricity from the U.S.

During 1971 and 1972, more than 90 per cent of Canada's exports of these materials went to the United States and 23 per cent of its imports came from the United States.

In the first quarter of 1972, the proportion of shipments to the U.S. rose to 92 per cent but the share of imports from countries other than the U.S. rose to 93 per cent.

In Toronto, spokesmen for major oil companies said the increase in exports to the U.S. to meet energy shortages would not cause any problems in Canada.

"The only gasoline we would consider exporting is surplus gasoline and we haven't had much of that lately anyway," an official of Imperial Oil Ltd. said.

A Shell Canada Ltd. spokesman said:

"Shell is committed to protecting the supply of motor gasoline, diesel fuels and heating oils to its existing Canadian customers — whether branded retailers, commercial accounts, municipalities or re-sellers."

Energy Minister Donald MacDonald has told the Commons that if the petroleum industry "finds it impossible" to restrict exports of gasoline, the government will impose controls as it did earlier with crude oil exports.

The energy minister said the squeeze may be felt by independents who have relied in the past on cheap crude oil imports into Eastern Canada. Those supplies are no longer available.

U.S. BOOM AT PEAK

WASHINGTON (UPI)

The U.S. government reported Tuesday that its index of leading economic indicators declined in April — a possible signal that the business boom of the last two and one-half years may have reached its peak.

The index tells what already has happened in 12 unrelated areas and gives a clue of what is likely to occur in the future. Since 1948 it has been very accurate in providing advance information.

Thus, if the current one-month decline persists — and if the index's record for accuracy continues — it probably means the business expansion that began in October of 1970 will peak out later this year.

Dollar Off, Gold $113

Times News Services

LONDON — Gold leaped to a new record price of $113.25 an ounce in London today, and renewed doubts about the dollar sent it plunging on the European markets.

Gold dealers, however, said trading volume was light, well below levels of past runs on the dollar.

The dollar nose-dived to its lowest postwar rate at the Frankfurt foreign exchange when the central bank raised the discount rate to seven from six per cent.

Other European exchanges reported strong gains at the dollar's expense.

Gold futures on the Winnipeg Commodity Exchange were up the $5 limit this morning and trading at record prices.

All months but July, 1973, opened in a good trade as confidence in the U.S. dollar weakened on European markets.

Pressure on the dollar sent prices tumbling on Wall Street. The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks closed at 908.86, down 16.71.

European analysts said the Watergate affair still played a part in undermining confidence in the U.S. currency, but also pointed out that a number of other factors were affecting individual markets.

In Paris, the dollar hit a new low of 4.3850 commercial francs, down from 4.4062 Tuesday. Dealers there said uncertainties over the summit meeting in Iceland Thursday and Pompidou affected Paris markets.

In Frankfurt, the dollar dropped to 2.7340 marks from 2.7390 marks Tuesday. A special factor there, however, was speculation that banks would be announcing higher lending rates.

This could attract sensitive short-term funds and strengthen the mark against the dollar.

One factor mentioned by dealers in London was the sharply rising cost of petroleum imported into the United States.

The higher prices could eventually weaken the U.S. balance-of-payments position and drag down the dollar.

In Zurich, the dollar weakened from 3.1105 Swiss francs late Tuesday to 3.0970 Swiss francs today.

In London, the pound improved from 2.5555 dollars to 2.5587 dollars.

Regret In Saigon

Times News Services

SAIGON — South Vietnam reacted with dismay today to the Canadian withdrawal from the International Commission for Control and Supervision (ICCS), but the Viet Cong said the arrangements fell through because the Canadians had distorted the Communist attitude "with ill intentions."

Canadian ambassador Michel Gauvin, who found he could not act because of the veto power exercised by Poland and Hungary over the four-power group that includes Indonesia, said Canada's decision to quit would not impair the peace team's functions.

"Nobody is indispensable," Gauvin said. "And Canada is not indispensable. There is no reason why the Commission should not continue to function after the departure of Canada." He suggested that an Asian nation take Canada's place.

A spokesman for the Viet Cong's provisional revolutionary government (PRG) said, "... The Canadian delegation to the ICCS has on many occasions displayed a lack of objectivity and lack of selflessness and has distorted with ill intentions the serious and goodwill attitude of the PRG, and covered up the acts of violation committed by the U.S. and the Saigon administration."

Saigon government spokesman Bui Bao Tuer, however, said the Canadian withdrawal will "make the task of controlling the cease-fire more difficult."

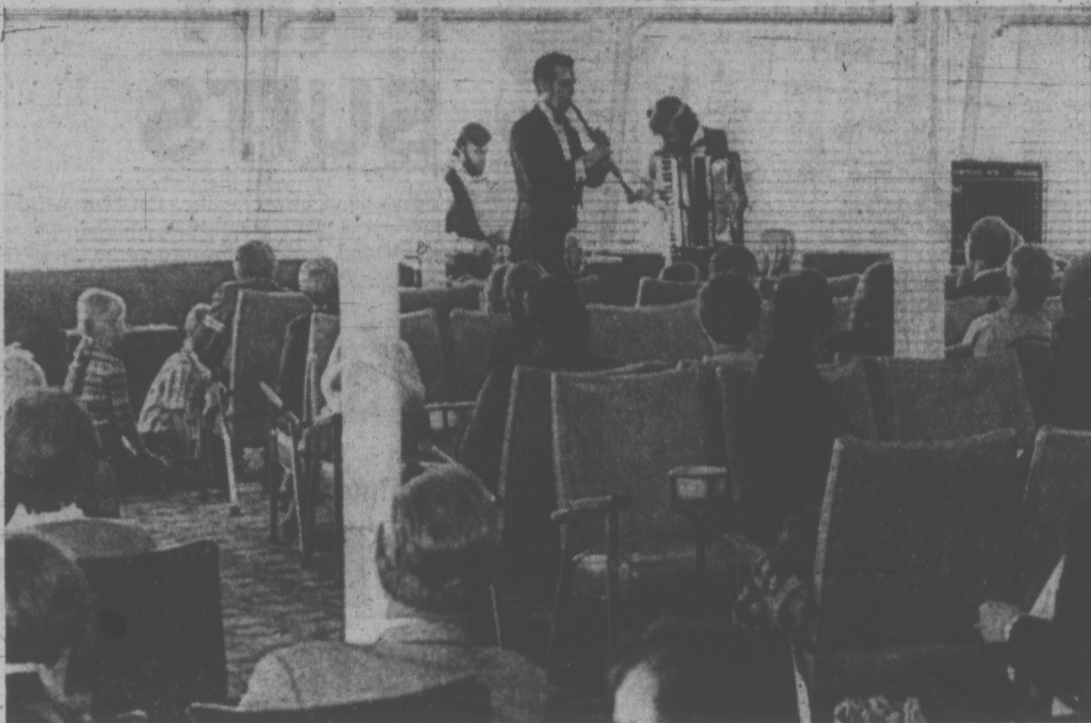

"We have always dreamed the idea of the Canadians pulling out of Vietnam and we learned the decision with dismay," Truc said.

Six countries, meanwhile, were mentioned in Saigon diplomatic circles as the most likely to replace Canada: Mexico, France, Brazil, Japan, Malaysia and Ireland. External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp announced in Ottawa Tuesday that Canada would pull out of the ICCS by July 31. The reason, he said, was the true team's failure to supervise the Vietnam cease-fire.

In Washington, presidential adviser Henry Kissinger said the Nixon administration "regrets" but "can understand" Canada's decision to withdraw its 280-man peace-keeping force from Vietnam.

"We regret it especially at this time when we hope that out of the negotiations going on in Paris an agreement that can be implemented will emerge," said Kissinger.

The peace-keeping force, meanwhile, bogged down again today on an issue on which it has bogged down before, the interrogation of four Communist prisoners captured by South Vietnamese after the truce went into effect Jan. 28.

MUSICAL RIDE on the Victoria-Vancouver run occurred daily for a five-day trial period which ended Monday as B.C. Ferries' officials measured response as a prelude to possibly extending the plan for the summer. Victoria's George McDowall and The Lads supplied the music.

ANTI-NDP GROUP LAUNCHED IN B.C.

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Majority Movement for Freedom and Private Enterprise, (MMFPE) a new political movement aimed at forming a non-socialist coalition to defeat the NDP government, has been launched in British Columbia.

Every household in the province will receive a flyer outlining the objectives of the new organization.

Named as spokesmen on the front page of the four-page flyer are Jag A. B. Whist of Kamloops, campaign manager in the last federal election for Kamloops Liberal MP Len Marchand, and Arnold F. C. Hean, a Burnaby lawyer and businessman.

Whist said Tuesday the movement represents a union of his own Grassroots Society to Restore Free Enterprise Government in Victoria (GSRFEGV) with the forces represented by Hean, who has for months been urging a right-wing coalition against the NDP.

Whist said the movement has a steering committee of 16 persons, but declined to identify them.

B.C. Gov't Bus Plan Confirmed

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

Municipal Affairs Minister James Lorimer today confirmed that his department is planning to construct a large transit depot close to the legislature.

"It will have to be quite a large development," he said. "However, the project will not start right away, not this year," he said.

Lorimer said the transit depot would be a key feature in his department's plan to stress rapid transit for Victoria and Vancouver.

Downtown streets should primarily be for buses and possibly rail-type vehicles like streetcars or people-movers, Lorimer said.

He said the proposals were in an early stage of development and some preliminary discussions were being held with the City of Victoria.

Lorimer also confirmed his department is interested in purchasing any Vancouver Island bus lines that are for sale.

"Some private companies have told us they want to get out of the field," he said. "However, we are not anxious to take them over just for the purpose of making them government-owned. If they are providing a service we are content to have them continue to do so."

He said that in areas where private lines were not providing what the government considered to be an adequate service, B.C. Hydro or Pacific Stage Lines (owned by the government) would expand to provide the service.

In some cases this expansion might overlap with a private company providing partial service.

He said it would be premature to make any announcements about the stage of negotiations or discussions with the Vancouver Island bus firms.

On Tuesday London Omnibus Tours Ltd., which owns five double-decker buses, said any announcements on their negotiations would have to come from Lorimer.

The company, if purchased

Turner Woos Tories

OTTAWA (UPI) — Finance Minister John Turner Tuesday made a determined bid to gain Conservative support for his corporate tax cuts, offering members of Parliament the right to vote to withdraw the measures after a review of their effects next April.

Turner introduced the corporate tax reduction legislation in the House of Commons Tuesday and he combined it with the personal income tax cuts announced in his federal budget last February.

In his legislation, Turner included a provision which would permit 60 MPs, one-quarter of the house, to move a motion after April 1, 1974 to have the whole issue of corporate tax cuts re-debated.

If the House of Commons decided by a majority vote that the measures should be withdrawn or restricted, the government would have to draw up new legislation, the finance minister said.

He said the proposal was "a precedent dictated by a unique situation where the government has only two more members than the opposition. I think it is a reasonable, sensible compromise."

Turner added he wanted the legislation debated and through the house before the summer recess, scheduled for the end of June. He said the government would have Parliament sit past that date if necessary to get the legislation through.

Turner's proposal appeared to gain Conservative support, but New Democratic Party leader David Lewis said his party would not support any legislation which included tax cuts for corporations.

Real Caouette, Social Credit leader, provoked the roars of laughter when he accused Prime Minister Trudeau of

Fish Deal Bought A Year—Davis

By IAIN HUNTER
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Fisheries Minister Jack Davis said Tuesday that the 11-month reciprocal fishing agreement signed with the U.S. Friday means that both countries have "bought a year in which to sort out our differences."

Although the Pacific Trollers Association has critized the agreement, Davis said that the alternative would have been far worse.

"It would have been much worse if the Americans had pushed us out of their waters and we had pushed them out of ours, forcing both of us to fish within our own lines," he said in an interview.

He described the present situation as "free trade with the United States on fish," and added that while the Americans were trying to tear up the existing reciprocal arrangement, Canada succeeded in retaining it for another year.

Pacific Trollers Association president Joe Garcia had said that under the new agreement, which runs from June 15 of this year to April 24, 1974, Canadian trollers would suffer a net loss of $310,000 a year, compared to the net loss to U.S. trollers of $48,000 a year.

But Davis stated that while Canadian boats no longer will be able to fish off about half the Washington State coast, U.S. fishermen have been pushed off the Vancouver Island West Coast.

The minister said halibut fishermen around Prince Rupert should be happy "that we obtained this respite."

'DRUG RAID' NETS $27

VANCOUVER (CP) — Three persons staging a mock drug arrest robbed a pensioner of $27 Tuesday.

Joseph Tremblay told police a young girl about 16 knocked on his door and asked to use the washroom. After he let her in, two men identifying themselves as police officers knocked on the door.

Tremblay said the men, who showed him a badge and a pair of handcuffs, searched the girl and appeared to find some drugs on her. He said they also searched the room as well as his wallet.

Tremblay later found the $27 was missing.

MPs Approve New Moose Ban

OTTAWA (CP) — In a tense vote Tuesday night the Commons gave second reading approval in principle, to legislation that would extend the partial ban on the death penalty for another five years.

The 138-to-114 vote, wider than many expected, left opponents of the death penalty jubilant and prompted Solicitor-General Warren Allmand to announce that the government may ask Parliament to abolish the death penalty.

"There's a point of view that if we did something to tighten up parole the House would be ready to consider complete abolition," he said after the vote was taken.

"I'm not saying we are definitely going to do it because we haven't made any decision."

The legislation, restricting the death penalty to murderers of on-duty policemen and prison guards, would renew an initial five-year ban that expired Dec. 29.

The bill now goes to the Commons justice and legal affairs committee where several members have announced they will attempt to have it amended.

Marcel Prud'homme (L — Montreal St. Denis) and Jim Fleming (L — York West) say they will seek abolition with a 25-year minimum sentence for all first-degree murderers.

Others say they will press for abolition under the current parole regulations, which allow convicted murderers to apply for release after 10 years.

The noisy vote, taken with galleries packed, followed 11 days of debate spread over more than four months. It was a free vote without the normal political restraints of party allegiance and led to a split in all parties but Social Credit.

Eighty-four Liberals, 25 Conservatives and 29 New Democrats voted for the bill, including Vancouver Island NDP members Tommy Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands) and Tom Barnett (Comox-Alberni); 21 Liberals, 77 Conservatives, one new Democrat, 14 Socials and Roch La Salle (Ind. — Joliette) voted against, including Victoria's two PC members, Allan McKinnon and Donald Munro.

Eleven MPs, excluding Speaker Lucien Lamoureux who did not vote, were absent or did not rise when the vote was taken. They were four Liberals, five Conservatives, one New Democrat and one Social Credit.

Type of Clay Centre of Suit

The engineering drawings showed firm grey clay but the contractor found loose blue clay.

These are the hard facts in a Supreme Court dispute concerning Wheaton Construction and the municipality of Saanich.

Saanich is asking Mr. Justice A. B. Macfarlane to set aside an arbitration award giving Wheaton damages of $58,608 after installing a sewer on Glanford west of Douglas last year.

The judge reserved his decision, which is expected to be handed down early next month.

Wheaton alleged the job specifications were misleading. Three test bores showed firm clay-subsoil. When excavation was carried out along the 3,500-foot project, loose blue clay was found, causing extra expense.

Wheaton had been paid $66,118 for the job and claimed $118,000 more because of extra work, including rock excavation.

An arbitration, as provided for in the contract, found unanimously in Wheaton's favor. It was chaired by lawyer John C. Cowan, with members Joe Cunliffe, a consulting engineer, and Vancouver soils engineering consultant Charles Brawner.

Louis Lindholm, appearing for Saanich, said the attack on the arbitration was based on the contention that the board had no jurisdiction, or that it exceeded its jurisdiction.

tion because it did not answer questions put forward by the parties.

Lindholm said part of the information to contractors included a caution, "tenderers should be aware that rock may be encountered at any point."

An affidavit by the contractor included the express statement that he had "full knowledge of the work required" having carefully examined the site.

Lindholm said the test holes could not be taken to represent general conditions to be encountered in the whole job.

Rodney Taylor, appearing for Wheaton, said his client was "factually misled" by information on the drawings and test hole logs which formed part of the contract.

BRITISH DIPLOMAT OUSTED IN COD WAR

REYKJAVI (AP) — The Icelandic government decided today to expel British diplomat Michael Elliott on grounds that he divulged secret information on the movements of Icelandic ships.

The latest development in the "cod war" between England and Iceland was announced by the government's chief spokesman, Hannes Jonsson.

Elliott, a member of the foreign office news department, arrived here during the weekend on temporary assignment.

For one member country of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO) to expel the diplomat of another member country has no precedent in the 24-year-old organization.

"bigamy." He said the Liberal leader was open to such a charge because Stanfield had accused Lewis of being "in bed" with the prime minister, and now Lewis was accusing Stanfield of having "climbed into the warm bed."

The Conservatives had said earlier they would support the cuts if they expired at the end of the year. Turner had rejected the suggestion, but his partial compromise Tuesday appeared to please the Tories.

"Mr. Turner has adopted the position that the corporate tax cuts should be adopted for the time being," Conservative leader Robert Stanfield told reporters outside the Commons.

Turner's proposed corporate tax cuts would reduce taxes for manufacturers from 49 to 40 per cent and also provide for a fast two-year write-off on machinery and equipment.

The personal income tax reductions would slash taxes by five per cent with a minimum reduction of $100 and a maximum cut of $500. The personal exemption for individuals would be increased by $100 and for couples it would be increased to $150.

No Men, Boats Go?

OTTAWA (CP) — The government may have to sell four destroyers because Maritime Command cannot afford to man them, Defence Minister James Richardson said Tuesday.

He told the Commons defence committee that disposal of four ships is being considered, and sale to a foreign country is a possibility.

The defence department is in the process of buying four new destroyers at an estimated cost of $252 million. Two are already in service, one is about to be commissioned and one is still under construction.

Richardson said a market survey has "no doubt" been made by the department with a view to possible sales, but he has not yet made any recommendation to cabinet.

ULSTER VOTES AMID BOMB BLASTS

BELFAST (UPI) — Strong security precautions were taken Wednesday for Northern Ireland's first local government elections in six years. But bombs exploded in the centre of Belfast and two candidates were attacked by a gang of youths.

At least eight persons, including one of the candidates, were reported injured in bombings, shootings and other incidents of violence across the British province.

A total of 806 persons have been killed since violence erupted among Roman Catholics, Protestants and security forces in August 1969.

Almost 27,000 troops and police were ordered out to guard more than 600 polling stations throughout the province when they opened at 9:30 a.m. Wednesday for the 12 hours of voting for local governments in 26 areas.

The British administration under secretary William Whitelaw used the proportional representation system of voting in a bid to end the domination in many areas by Ulster's two-to-one Protestant majority.

Army spokesmen said two persons were slightly injured when a car bomb blew up on Northern Street three minutes after a warning was telephoned to a Belfast newspaper.

L.A. Whites Help Elect City's First Black Mayor

LOS ANGELES (Reuter) — Thomas Bradley, the son of poor black Texan sharecroppers who migrated to Los Angeles in 1924 to get a better life for their family, has been elected the first black mayor in the city's history.

Claiming victory early today over incumbent Mayor Sam Yorty, Bradley, 55, said in an emotional speech:

"Tonight was the fulfilment of a dream — an impossible dream — because the people of this city have given to me the highest honor that can be given to any citizen."

Bradley's victory came eight years after the violent Watts riots in the city's black ghetto and capped a gradual swing of blacks from street protests to the ballot box.

Los Angeles, third-largest city in the United States, followed Cleveland, Ohio, Gary, Indiana and Newark, New Jersey, in electing black mayors.

But unlike the other three cities, which have large black populations, blacks form only 15 per cent of the Los Angeles electorate and Bradley had to count heavily on white support.

BRADLEY

YORTY

Yorty, 63, who has been mayor for three four-year terms, refused to concede defeat and went off to bed blaming his poor showing on the failure of white voters to turn out in the San Fernando valley.

Bradley supporters accused Yorty of introducing "racist" elements into the election when he appealed to whites last week to turn out to counteract a "black bloc vote."

Bradley and Yorty also clashed in the 1969 mayoral election but Bradley lost that time by five per cent.

The turnout was relatively light yesterday, with 65 per cent of the 1.14 million voters going to the polls compared with 75 per cent in 1969.

With 76 per cent of the vote counted, Bradley had 324,000 or 55 per cent of the vote compared to Yorty's 260,000 or 45 per cent.

Born in Calvert, Texas, in 1917, Bradley came to Los Angeles at the age of seven.

He is an attorney, a Liberal Democrat, a Methodist, a former police lieutenant who served on the Los Angeles police force for 21 years and a city councillor for 10 years.

The district he represents in the racially mixed south of Los Angeles includes the Watts area.

Yorty, an unsuccessful candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination in 1971, was celebrated for spending much of his time touring the world.

An opponent said of him, "Thank God we have a mayor who doesn't muddle in civic affairs." But Yorty claimed the trips were to drum up world trade for the city.

Bradley said in his victory speech he would work to rid school campuses of violence and to stamp out violence in the streets.

Victoria Press Sells Old Site KOOTENAY HOME IN LATE AUGUST

Victoria Press Ltd. has sold its former plant building on Douglas Street to A and M Holdings Ltd. of Victoria, it was announced today.

The Douglas Street property is immediately north of the new Victoria Press building.

The sale was announced jointly by Stuart Underhill, vice-president of Victoria Press, and Anthony Ellis for A and M Holdings Ltd.

The purchasers will permit

Colonist Printers Ltd. to continue to operate in its present premises in the rear of the building until Dec. 31, when they will be asked to move.

All areas in the 78,000 square-foot building will be renovated under the direction of Belmont Management Ltd. of Victoria. First section to be renovated will be the Douglas Street offices, involving 18,200 square feet.

Renovations will be completed in July.

It is understood that the motor vehicle branch of the provincial government has studied the site but no lease has been signed.

Belmont Management property manager Sam Vennard said he was confident the property will be leased immediately after renovations are completed because of the handy location and parking facilities at the rear of the property.

Front of the building would be sandblasted and painted, he said, and a 12-unit air conditioning system installed.

Later, the section occupied by Colonist Printers would also be renovated for lease as offices.

The building was constructed in 1951 and occupied by Victoria Press Ltd. from that time until Sept. 16, 1972, when the company moved into new premises.

Purchase price of the former Victoria Press building was not announced. However it is understood to be about $500,000 with renovations to cost about another half million.

The Esquimalt-based destroyer escort HMCS Kootenay is expected to be home by the end of August.

She has been a backup to Canada's 290-man truce observer force in Vietnam. The team leaves that country July 31.

A Canadian armed forces spokesman said today the Kootenay would return from her station in the Far East two weeks after the last Canadian servicemen leaves Vietnam.

Her arrival-date, he said, hinges on whether this would be July 31 or earlier.

The Kootenay is to replace HMCS Terra Nova, which has been standing by off the Vietnam coast. The Terra Nova is due home in late June.

The Kootenay left Esquimalt May 14 and is due to rendezvous with the Terra Nova just off Manila June 7. She will carry out exercises during her Far East patrol.

Hawker Siddeley, Barrett Confer

LONDON (UPI) — Premier Barrett began a three-day visit to London today with a one-hour meeting with Sir Arnold Hall, chairman and managing director of Britain's giant Hawker Siddeley aircraft and automotive manufacturing group.

A spokesman for Barrett refused to say whether he is seeking expanded investment by Hawker Siddeley in B.C.

But a Hawker Siddeley spokesman described the meeting as primarily a "courtesy call."

He said Hawker Siddeley has two large subsidiary companies in Canada engaged in engineering and aircraft manufacturing.

Barrett arrived this morning accompanied by B.C. deputy minister of finance G. S. Bryson, their wives and members of his personal staff.

Barrett spent most of the day resting after the all-night Trans-Atlantic flight. He also did some sightseeing in London.

Thursday he was scheduled to have an audience with Queen Elizabeth at Buckingham Palace, confer with treasury and foreign and Commonwealth office officials and be dinner guest of the Canada-United Kingdom Chamber of Commerce.

Barrett leaves for Paris Saturday morning. Later he will visit Vienna, Munich, Bonn, Amsterdam and other European cities.

Alderman To Probe Split Shifts

A Victoria alderman promised Tuesday to look into reports of several city maintenance employees required to work a split shift of seven hours over a 12-hour period.

Bill Tindall said he wants to know why the practice occurs. If the arrangement could be changed it should, and if this is impossible the employees should be given an explanation, he said.

He added that he wasn't surprised the men themselves hadn't brought the matter to council's attention because it is "quite common" that people fear for their jobs in any business under such circumstances.

Ian Fraser, president of the inside workers local of the Canadian Union of Public Employees, said casual workers are not protected by the contract on hours of work.

As a result of the last negotiations, City Hall had promised to review the hours of work of all employees and this particular case had been referred to management, he said.

The maintenance employees in question start work at noon and continue to 3 p.m., then again from 5 p.m. to 7 p.m. and then again from 10 p.m. to midnight.

David Lewis Here For Night of Fun

David Lewis, national New Democratic Party leader, will attend a "fun night" at Esquimalt Legion at 8:45 p.m. Friday as part of his tour of B.C.

He will land at Pat Bay airport at 6:15 p.m. and stay overnight. The $2-per-person fun night, offering wine, cheese and dancing, is at 622 Admirals.

A Promise Kept

Foreign sources have expressed "regret but understanding" of Canada's announced intention to withdraw from the Vietnam International Commission for Control and Supervision. That should also be the domestic reaction to External Affairs Minister Sharp's decision.

This country had doubts when it accepted the invitation to serve on the international observer group. It took on the job on condition that the peace be enforced and that the commission be permitted to work with full effect in investigating and reporting all military violations of the peace terms. Those conditions have not been met. The fighting — including firing on ICCS personnel — continues in many parts of Vietnam; the two Communist members of the commission — Poland and Hungary — have vetoed numerous efforts of the Canadian and Indonesian members to study reported instances of violation. Clearly the whole observer operation has become a farce — just as the former International Control Commission proved to be.

Canada served its stipulated 60 days and extended this a further two months. Stalemate and failure of the observer process are sufficient justification for the June 30 deadline now set — with an additional month if necessary to accommodate the renewed talks in Paris. Mr. Sharp — even though he has left open the possibility of extra service if a replacement has not been found to help supervise possible Vietnam elections — should have full support from Parliament and the nation for his terminal action.

Anticipating criticism that withdrawal may cause a crumbling of the fragile pseudo-peace that exists, Mr. Sharp says, "Nor do we believe that Canadian withdrawal would have any significant effect upon the prospects for peace in Vietnam. That depends upon the parties to the peace agreement and not upon the ICCS."

That is a correct statement. The commission is only a tool to aid the peace, it is in no sense intended to create or maintain the peace.

There may, indeed, be a positive advantage to be gained by the withdrawal. Coupled with the renewed discussions between Mr. Kissinger and Hanoi officials, the Canadian action may serve to emphasize the continuing disregard by both sides of strict observance of the peace terms. The publicity may result in a wide demand for proper implementation of the signed agreement.

Canada's action is a reflection of our original purpose in taking on the commission job. Lacking any ambition to become a force in the Vietnamese situation, and without ideological axes to grind, Canada saw the commission as merely an opportunity to help to make the Vietnam peace a workable concept. Since it has become obvious that neither side has this objective sincerely in view, the job has ceased to exist.

What's Best for Conservation?

Renewed emphasis on his campaign to acquire for Canada fisheries jurisdiction over offshore waters extending to the continental shelf — in some cases more than 200 miles from the beach — is matched by Fisheries Minister Jack Davis's realistic expectation of strong opposition and delaying tactics from nations which send their fleets long distances to make hauls.

The minister notes, however, a changing attitude in recent years, during which "much has happened ... the biggest single happening has been a shortage of fish."

He mentions this development as he refers to his 1968 talk in Boston during which he proposed the Canadian take-over of the Grand Banks — a concept then viewed as visionary.

Shortage of fish, wherever it occurs, will probably be the determining factor in conservation measures impressive to all nations. Whether or not that will be accomplished more effectively by controls established by individual countries, or by world agreement on an international code, remains for the future to determine.

It is reasonable enough to assume that some nations are more interested and more competent than others in enforcing regulations to preserve and build up species. The original success of the North Pacific halibut treaty in restoring a fish harvest that was seriously depleted indicates the capabilities of Canadians and Americans in that field.

It is nevertheless unrealistic to expect the fleets of nations which have historically made long journeys to the fishing grounds — British and Portuguese are cases in point — to forego their right of entry to areas that have been considered the high seas under previous international law.

How the respective privileges of long standing may be apportioned on a shared basis seems a logical theme for discussion at the next international convention. It will be an optimistic national delegation, however, which expects settlement of that issue in Chile next year.

Idiot's Delight

To those who consider vandalism an offence to all decent sensibilities, the incident at Federal Way, Washington, the other day represents poetic justice and a principle of pedagogy.

The car salesman with the mad laugh, who appears on a television commercial bashing cars with a sledge hammer, has discovered the influence of teaching by example. When he arrived at his sales lot the other day, someone had copied his technique, smashing various fixtures and appointments on new and used cars and campers.

The teacher had taught; his pupils had learned.

A New Mood in World Affairs

NEW YORK — It is not easy for the American people to believe in the noble sentiments of politicians these days, but when the leaders of the Soviet Union and West Germany meet on the Rhine and begin negotiating contracts for a "radical turn" toward co-operation in a new world order, even the Watergate seems less important.

Every nation has its nightmare. Russia's has been invasion across the Eastern European plains from the industrial West. Germany's nightmare has been inflation. Britain's has been unemployment. America's, since the invention of the atom bomb and the intercontinental ballistic missile, has been another Pearl Harbor.

But now there is a new mood if not a new order in world affairs. Not so long ago, Chairman Khrushchev was talking about the inevitable struggle between the Soviet Union and the West, in which the socialist system was going to surpass the industrial and agricultural production of the capitalist nations and "bury" us as a result of our own contradictions.

Soviet Problems

Well, we have our contradictions and our problems — the Watergate puts them on the television all day long — but the Soviet Union has its own problems at home, its longing for a decent life for its people, its ideological conflict with China, its technological lags and its savage domestic political conspiracies that make Watergate seem almost innocent.

Nevertheless, Moscow is changing and adjusting to the economic determinism of the coming age, to the imperatives of the computer and the new scientific revolution, to the need for peace in the West if it is going to have trouble with China in the East.

Chairman Brezhnev, visiting West Germany, didn't sound anything like Chairman Stalin or even Chairman Khrushchev who started the accommodation with the West but still felt that he had to shake his fist at the wicked capitalists.

"On the whole," Brezhnev said, "one can perhaps say that our planet today is closer to durable, lasting peace than ever before. And the Soviet Union is shifting all its weight to buttress this beneficial tendency ..."

He continued: "The Europe that has more than once been the hotbed of aggressive wars that have brought tremendous destruction and the death of millions of people must become forever a thing of the past. We want a new continent in its place — a continent of peace, mutual trust, and reciprocally advantageous co-operation among all states."

Of course he wants Willy Brandt, who is the real hero of this movement toward accommodation, to accept the permanent division of Germany, with Eastern Germany under Communist control, though Brezhnev would never consider any division of Soviet territory or independence, even in the Baltic states. But even so, the Brezhnev-Brandt compromise is an historic event, which will probably be remembered long after the Watergate is forgotten.

... the real hero

In the relations between the nations, something historic is going on here that, despite all the domestic conflicts in the United States, the Soviet Union, China, West Germany, Britain and France, may create a new order in the world.

The idea is beginning to get around in all the major capitals from Tokyo to Peking and Moscow, and through Europe to Washington, that the major nations have more to gain by co-operating with one another than by fighting one another. This is the meaning of Brezhnev's visit to West Germany and his visit next month to Washington.

He is coming to this country at a very awkward time, and a lot of people are saying he should postpone the visit or even skip it, but the Watergate scandal is not the only big news in the world. The struggle in Moscow between the people who want to carry on the cold war with the West and the people there who want to make an accommodation with Germany, the Common Market, Japan, and the U.S. is fundamental to the future order of the world. There is a chance for sanity here and it shouldn't be missed.

Accordingly, the people who are talking about impeaching President Nixon or forcing his resignation maybe ought to look beyond the Watergate. It could be that the evidence will force the House to bring in a bill of impeachment and the Senate to preside over that awful judgment, but meanwhile the world goes on, and Nixon has to speak for the republic at a critical point in world affairs.

Maybe Years

Time is important here. The Watergate hearings will go on for months. They have to go on, because the important thing is not to convict a few criminals but to get at the facts of the whole political conspiracy which has been corrupting the country, and this will mean prolonged hearings, criminal trials, and appeals that will take months and maybe years.

But meanwhile the politics of the world continue. Moscow and Peking are changing. Europe is uniting and challenging America in the markets of the world, Japan is reclaiming her place in the sun, and somebody has to speak for America, regardless of Watergate.

This can only be the President. He is in terrible trouble now and does not even dare have a news conference and answer the questions on everybody's mind, but until the Watergate evidence is all in, he still has to deal with the Soviet Union, the dollar crisis, the trade crisis, the arms crisis, and the opportunities of a changing Soviet Union, China, Europe and the world.

The Lion That Squeaked

OTTAWA — After all the months of head-shaking and speculation, the dreaded "crunch" in Parliament turned out to be a generally hilarious bedroom farce.

The winner, obviously, is John Turner. By a rather neat move — and to the intense relief of his more nervous colleagues — he has secured the essentials of his tax policy at the expense of a concession to Robert Stanfield which has little more than symbolic significance.

Mr. Turner's problem was the proposed reduction to 40 per cent in the rate of corporate tax applicable to manufacturers and processors. For David Lewis, this is a "ripoff". Mr. Stanfield's position has been slightly more complex. He recognized that a good deal of business planning had taken this measure of relief into consideration. But he was unconvinced that it should be implanted permanently in the tax system and declared that he would not support it beyond the end of the present year.

Dire Forecast

For the Minister of Finance, who maintains that tax reduction has become even more necessary in consequence of the rise of American protectionism, so limited a change was unacceptable. Thus it has been freely predicted for months that the minority Government must eventually (after all the postponements) come into collision with a hostile majority in the House of Commons.

There is no collision and not much evidence that the Conservatives, lacking a surge of support in the country, were at all eager for one. Mr. Turner, in a polite gesture to Mr. Stanfield, has agreed to submit an interim report on the operations of the tax measures by April 1, 1974. At that time, if 60 members so request, the Government will provide an occasion for Parliament to re-examine the changes and, in effect, to cancel them if it so decides.

Thus, in form, Mr. Stanfield is asked to support the measures only for fiscal 1973-74. In fact, the onus will be on the Conservatives to move for an increased tax on business. It will be a remarkable event in our politics if the Conservatives do any such thing.

Mr. Stanfield poked gentle fun at the Government, remarking in light-hearted comments that even a cat deserves three months. The way was clear for Mr. Lewis to announce his party's bold and principled decision to oppose the ripoff at all costs; a stand greeted with general mirth by the Liberals and Conservatives. Mr. Lewis, long accused of being the political bedmate of the Prime Minister, denounced both parties and said that Mr. Stanfield was a consenting adult. Real Caouette brought the entertainment to a conclusion by observing that, in these circumstances, Mr. Trudeau must be a bigamist.

... the winner

And that was the long-predicted crunch!

One conclusion to be drawn from the affair is that the obsessive search for predictables in a House of Minorities is an unrewarding business. But this is not to suggest that minority governments are stable. The record suggests that they more commonly meet defeat on issues which develop suddenly (and may develop at any time) — issues which cannot be plotted in advance by attentive observers and on which ministers cannot buy insurance through long months of careful planning.

Of the three cases in this century, all are in this pattern. Mr. King in 1946 fell on the customs scandal which had not surfaced when Parliament met. Mr. Dieffenbaker's defeat in 1963 was the result of a chain of unexpected events; a Liberal switch on nuclear policy; revolt in the cabinet and an apparent change of mind over a famous supper hour by Robert Thompson. No one expected the Liberal defeat on a 1968 tax bill; least of all Lester Pearson, whose troops were simply missing when the roll was called.

Latent Explosion

As a result of Mr. Turner's symbolic concession, the government can probably look forward to a quiet June; it would not appear at the moment that any group is much interested in disrupting it. But this does not necessarily mean much for the longer term if the Prime Minister decides against an early and voluntary dissolution. The vulnerability remains; any of the issues currently troubling the nation — or perhaps one not foreseen — could explode into a new crisis in the House of Commons.

In what was predictable the government, admittedly after a very long delay, has managed with skill. What it must always fear, while it remains dependent on disunited enemies, is the unpredictable. Tax money nowadays provides ministers with retinues of advisers; it has yet to provide a crystal ball capable of foretelling in reliable fashion the shape of troubles to come.

LETTERS FROM OUR READERS

Plain Wall Better

A story in the Times issue of May 16 by Susan Rutan refers to that grotesque blob of paint called a mural. I saw its beginning on a recent visit and wondered at the time if the management of the Gorge Road Hospital had been misled.

It definitely is a disservice to a wonderful hospital and its outstanding service and personnel.

With over 55 years of coloring, painting and decorating contracting behind me, I can find no reason for anything other than a blending contrast fourth wall.

Even the very best in murals would be wasted on that floor by reason of the mental confusion of old age along with other infirmities. — Len Skelton, 4068 Grange Rd.

The Murals

The federal government is trying through L.I.P. grants to give young people the opportunity to be independent, to develop and use their skills and talents instead of collecting Unemployment Insurance, and thus to give them self-respect and a sense of accomplishment.

One such grant was awarded to a young couple in Victoria, to paint murals at the new Gorge Hospital. The sketches and designs were approved by the hospital. But now, the hospital administrator plus a handful of people has decided that the depiction of life showing cherubs and a mother holding her baby is obscene. They intend to obliterate the murals as of June first.

Perhaps the murals are not "your cup of tea". But, the so-called generation gap widens when we of the adult generation refuse to accept and acknowledge the talents of youth and their concepts of life.

As a taxpayer, I also object to my money being wasted in this manner, by individuals who actually are not in a position to destroy a work of art paid for by the federal government. I urge all of you to view the murals and judge for yourselves. The colors and sense of movement are a joy to behold. The Merions are to be congratulated. We must live in a sick society when a mother and child are considered obscene. Is It Necessary To Hate What You Don't Understand? — A. Burns, 209-912 Selkirk Ave.

There First

Most responsible newspapers are as concerned about the veracity of the advertising content as the news stories.

Therefore, knowing your newspaper to fall into this category, it was with dismay I read a rather extravagant claim in an ad carried by your paper on Page 6, Friday, May 25.

The ad was placed by C-FAX Radio heralding its coverage of the Swiftsure Yachting Classic on the weekend. In particular its claim that for the "First Time Ever" — Direct reports and rounding times from Swiftsure Bank!

It was not the first time, at all. That distinction goes to Radio Station CKDA.

It was during the late '50's, the days of the valiant Maruffa when the yachting classic was being rejuvenated, that "DA broadcast from all points of the strait, including Swiftsure Bank when the old Lightship was still on station.

The broadcasts emanated from the wheelhouse of the Island Tug and Barge's ocean-going tug Sudbury One, skippered by the late Captain Harley Blagborne.

The 5-minute broadcasts, heard every half-hour, were relayed to its downtown location via a receiver-transmitter located on a mountaintop in Sooke. During the night hours, yachts were tracked by radar after their positions had been pinpointed on the screen before nightfall.

In fact, on one of those early weekends, the broadcaster responsible worked for 36 hours non-stop.

I ought to know. It was me. — Andy Stephen.

60 YEARS AGO

From The Times of May 30, 1913:

INDIANAPOLIS—Five nations — the United States, France, England, Germany and Italy — battled today for supremacy in the automobile world in the third annual 500-mile race here. The prizes will be $50,000 in gold from the Speedway, and $25,000 cash and valuable trophies from accessory concerns. Promptly at 10 o'clock the 20 cars began the long race around the 2½ mile track. The cars got away to a flying start and were going 50 miles an hour as they came down the home stretch. The drivers were suffering intensely from the heat.

Science Sends a Team On an Ocean Voyage

Canadian scientists working aboard laboratory ships in the Pacific are not, to their regret, the oceanographic superstars of the north.

Take, for example, a recent cruise of CSS Parizeau, code-named Transpac 72.

Will the world ever see a television series showing our scientists swimming in a South Seas lagoon with strange and lovely creatures of the deep? Not likely.

But there is a film, produced by an oceanographer who had never used a movie camera before, showing his colleagues washing bottles and buckets.

It also shows an unphotogenic collection of sea water samples, a lot of test tubes containing blobs of tar, and some doubtful-looking characters in the ship's lab at the end of a 14-hour work shift.

Cinematically speaking the movie of Transpac 72 is a sure film-festival loser, the only colorful thing in it being the chief scientist's sports shirts.

Scientifically speaking, the Parizeau cruise, like much of the unpublished work of Canadian ocean scientists, was a winner.

Readers are advised not to hold their breath waiting for dramatic revelations about Secrets of the Sea Exposed. Testing takes time. But they can be assured of one thing: the ocean is not dying, contrary to some exaggerated reports from the Doomsday Club.

The Tokyo-Victoria cruise of the Parizeau was not quite a typical deep ocean cruise, since nearly everything went according to plan. The near-perfection of Transpac 72 is the envy of some scientists who remember other shipboard operations when hardly anything went according to plan.

But the techniques and daily routine followed by chief scientist Dr. C. S. Wong and his colleagues were similar to those of most chemical and physical oceanographers working at sea.

Collection of water samples for analyses has been a major chore for sea scientists ever since an English physician, Dr. Alexander Marcet, devised water sampling devices 150 years ago. His sampling bottles and thermometers, show striking similarities to some of the more sophisticated ones used today.

The three articles on oceanography appearing here today were prepared by Environment Canada as background material to supplement news stories which appear fairly often on particular aspects of the marine environment.

During the Parizeau cruise 28 samples taken from varying depths (from the surface to nearly three miles down) were obtained at each of 20 stations along the 35th parallel. The 1.7-litre bottles were strung on hydrographic cable, each with a pre-set closing mechanism and thermometers.

Dr. A. B. Cornford, a young chemist on his first deep-ocean cruise, explains the procedure, and some of the difficulties:

"When you're sampling to a depth of 5,000 metres it's very important to have a ship which can remain on station for five hours, regardless of weather. It took us about five hours to put down the cable, attaching the bottles at specified intervals.

"When they were in position we had to wait for them to equilibrate (settle down), then once they were filled they were sealed to make sure they contained only water from the precise depths to be sampled.

"To close the bottles you drop a 'messenger,' a two-pound brass weight which slides down the wire. It hits the trip mechanism to release the upper and lower lids, which are on elastic springs, and the lids flap shut. It also trips the thermometers so that you have a record of the temperature at the time the sample was taken.

"It takes about half an hour for the messenger to get to the 28th bottle. So you can see you have to be very careful when you string the bottles on the wire to make sure there's no foul-up near the top, or the rest of them won't trip. You'd have to bring up the wire and start all over again. Very tedious."

Miraculously, this never happened on Parizeau's latest cruise. Twenty perfect line drops out of 20 casts is thought to be something of a record.

Cornford continues: "Now during this five-hour performance, you want to keep the wire as vertical as possible, otherwise you have to include the angle in calculations. Also it's not helpful if the ship runs over the wire and chews it up with its propellers."

This could happen in rough seas with ordinary ships unable to hold position. But the beautiful Parizeau, evidently everybody's favorite ship of the moment, was designed for oceanographic work with a bow propeller enabling her to hold steady or turn on the spot.

(Praise for the ship, and for Captain Alan Chamberlain and his crew who are at sea on her for over 200 days a year, is a recurring theme in the story of Transpac 72.)

The early birds of the scientific team were UBC graduate student Dave Green, who fished for tar balls at daybreak, and Dr. Walter Cretney, champion bucket washer.

Each morning before arriving on station for line drops at 7 a.m., Captain Chamberlain slowed the ship to four knots for an hour while net tows were made for the collection of tar balls and particulate wastes.

For the first 2,000 miles of the journey from Japan tar balls — soft, sticky lumps of weathered oil ranging in size from small beads to large marbles — were netted, along with small amounts of plastic materials.

Quantities were not alarming: only a few ounces were found per acre.

However, once the ship passed north of Hawaii the quantities of tar and plastic dropped rapidly, and on the trip up the U.S. coast from Santa Barbara to Victoria no pollutants at all were detected.

Scientists are not sure why there is such a marked difference between the two sides of the Pacific. Dave Green, under the direction of Wong and Cretney, is now analyzing the tar lumps, trying to answer this question... and another: do tar lumps present any hazard to marine life?

Even before the net tows began another scientist was up at 4:30 a.m. to clean his stainless steel buckets with the zeal of an obsessive housewife.

Walter Cretney's worst enemy is oil.

If he had an Aladdin's lamp Cretney would wish for a ship that used no oil at all, or an anti-rust preparation to replace winch grease and all the other oily nuisances necessary on every ship.

A major oil spill for Cretney is a particle of winch grease blown into his bucket. Contamination is a smear of natural oil from a fingertip, carelessly spoiling his gallon sample.

He is analyzing his carefully collected samples for hydrocarbons and other organic compounds, measuring in parts per billion, and the last thing he wants to discover is a large percentage of oil.

CSS Parizeau... no place for a cinematic great

"Scientists before now have cried 'pollution' only to find on checking that they were looking at winch grease," he explains.

"So I choose my station on the bow overhang, to collect water before the ship passed through it."

Then the "cleanest" samples were extracted on deck with an organic solvent and the extracts were sealed with Teflon shields before being whisked through oil-speckled air for storage.

(Next to oil, Cretney's major worry was the absence of cigarette smokers who forgot that chemicals used to clean his bucket, hexane and acetone, are very flammable.)

Some reports of the life of ocean scientists at sea give the impression that the men have leisure time for reading, studying, sunbathing or fishing. These do not take into account weather conditions in the north Pacific (not balmy) or the pace set by dedicated scientists like Wong (not leisurely).

After samples were collected from the line casts some standard analyses were made daily in the ship's lab.

"It got to be a point of honor to finish them, even though it meant working an average of 12 hours a day, seven days a week," Cornford said.

"Dr. Wong and Colin Jackson had a bit of a contest to see how many alkalinity samples they could do in a day, and Dave Green and I have the record for salinity samples."

"We got behind (there was a birthday party) and let a few of the casts pile up, so we did six casts all in one day. Six times 28 — now that was tedious."

What with bottle washing, line drops and lab work there was little time of sunbathing or movies. Two birthdays brought special dinners from the galley ("the food was always excellent") and Cornford caught three fish. So much for recreation.

The remarkable thing, Cretney and Cornford agree, is that the work went so smoothly, "especially when you consider that the crew had already spent four months in the Arctic on a hydrographic survey before going straight on to Tokyo."

They also agree with Wong, who averaged less sleep than anyone, that towards the end of the cruise "there was a marked psychological desire to get home as fast as possible."

'What Are the Scientists Doing?'

"What are scientists doing about it?" people wonder when they read oceanic obituaries suggesting that a giant-size stagnant pond will inevitably replace the deep blue sea.

Of course the outlook is not that grim, the world-wide cesspool is not just around the corner, and scientists are doing a tremendous amount of research to discover what is going on in the ocean.

Unfortunately their work is rarely reported. A crumbling coral reef makes a much more dramatic story than a chemistry lab.

Yet the recent coral reef scare turned out to be what oceanographers call a non-problem. After the U.S. Congress had voted $5 million "to combat the scourge" two marine biologists pointed out that reef damage, almost certainly the result of tropical typhoons, had been going on for centuries.

of this burning on atmospheric carbon dioxide content was negligible, amounting to little more than that produced by natural decay processes that continually recycle carbon.

During the past few centuries, however, man has begun to burn large quantities of fossil fuels that were formed over five hundred million years ago, and this combustion is now measurably increasing atmospheric carbon dioxide.

Heat Waves Return

This is where the greenhouse effect comes in.

The earth absorbs the sun's radiation (visible and infrared medium short wave) and sends back heat rays (long wave-length infrared radiation) into space. These heat rays are partially trapped in the atmosphere by carbon dioxide and water vapor, which both absorb the outgoing longer waves.

Thus increases in atmospheric carbon dioxide could cause higher air temperatures, just as the glass of a greenhouse "traps" heat. At the same time other factors such as dust may be leading to a cooling of the atmosphere.

sphere. That is the global picture.

Here in Victoria and Vancouver are the small bottles of sea water which will help define the role of the ocean in absorbing carbon dioxide. The samples are being analyzed for a number of chemical "ingredients" including:

Total carbon dioxide dissolved in the ocean, forming different carbon compounds in varying amounts from the surface to the ocean depths.

Partial vapor pressure of carbon dioxide between air and ocean, which controls the transfer of carbon dioxide between the atmosphere and the sea.

Dissolved oxygen, which is useful in tracing water masses and in understanding biochemical oxidation in sea water.

Salt Measure

Salinity, which is also used to identify water masses, and to calculate the density of sea water.

Radiocarbon content, which helps determine the air-sea exchange of carbon dioxide and the mixing rates between water masses.

Radiocarbon content also tells the "age" of water, in the same way that carbon dating is used by geologists and archaeologists. Ocean scientists point out that "age" is a useful but somewhat misleading term, since it is really the length-of-time the water sample has been out of contact with the atmosphere. This dating also helps oceanographers map the paths of deep ocean currents.

Hard to See

The water samples are also analyzed for nutrient content (inorganic phosphates, nitrates and silicates) and for organic compounds.

The chemist investigating water quality in a very complex ocean has a problem of communication greater even than that of the marine biologist of physicists.

A non-scientist can visualize a dying starfish deprived of its reef, an oily seagull or even a deep ocean current, but it's much harder to "see" things like dissolved phosphates in a spectrophotometer or hydrocarbons going through the obstacle course of a gas chromatograph. (Back to the comics or the crossword puzzle?)

A former director of Scripps Institution of Oceanography gives a broad view of the ocean chemists' work, particularly their interest in the role of the ocean in absorbing surplus carbon dioxide.

"Human beings are now carrying out a large-scale geophysical experiment of a kind that could not have happened in the past nor be reproduced in the future."

"Within a few centuries we are returning to the atmosphere? The concentrated organic carbon stored in sedimentary rocks over hundreds of millions of years."

This experiment, if adequately documented, may yield a far-reaching insight into the processes determining weather and climate."

Caught in a Cup

Weather, climate, ocean environment: a large, long-range view.

Invisible hydrocarbons caught in a tea cup of water and measured in parts per billion may seem insignificant, but even a tiny drop of ocean analyzed by an inquisitive scientist can add a bit of knowledge to help fill in the global jig-saw puzzle picture.

The Early Findings Of History's First Hydrographers

Oceanography is not one science but a mingling of many sciences oriented towards the sea.

For centuries the study of oceans was left to fishermen and sailors who had to reckon with tides and currents, and so became the world's first hydrographers. Then in the 18th century scholars began to take a more theoretical interest in the liquid, fresh or salt, which covers more than 70 per cent of the planet.

In 1732 the accepted definition of water was found in Baeuhaeve's Elementa Chemiae: "A very fluid, scentless, tasteless, transparent, colorless liquor, which turns to ice with a certain degree of cold."

It wasn't a very comprehensive description, but then neither is a modern chemical definition of sea water: "A large but dilute electrolytic solution which probably contains all the naturally occurring elements known to man."

Sailors and fishermen, or anyone passing an inefficient sewer outfall, could say a lot more about the scentless, tasteless, transparent electrolytic solution. In any case Elementa Chemiae's last word on water soon became obsolete.

Within half a century English chemist Henry Cavendish was experimenting with Ben Franklin's scientific sensation of the day, electricity. He was trying to shoot electric currents through tubes of water, using a battery composed of an Italian professor of anatomy, Galvani. Every time he hooked up the electrodes the water did a disappearing act.

Cavendish first blamed faulty apparatus, as scientists are inclined to do, but after repeated checking he concluded that electricity really did make water vanish.

His definition of water: "Inflammable air."

By the early 19th century scientists were leaving their laboratories for studies in the field and on the ocean. One of the first true oceanographers was Dr. Alexander Marcet, an English physician, who analysed sea water collected in 1819, in sampling devices similar to those used today.

His conclusions were supported by similar experiments made by Danish chemist Georg Forchhammer in the 1860s and by German chemist William Dittmar who analysed water samples taken during the four-year round-the-world cruise of HMS Challenger, from 1872 to 1876.

The purpose of their analyses was to determine the percentage composition of dissolved solids in the ocean, and they found that chloride, sodium, magnesium, sulfate, calcium and potassium make up 99 per cent of the dissolved salts in sea water.

They also agreed that the ratio of any one of the major constituents to the total dissolved solids is nearly constant in the sea, even though the total concentration may vary from place to place.

These variations studied by today's ocean chemists give part of the chemical picture of the ocean, and their findings in turn are used by physicists and biologists in inter-related research.

Is this information useful, or is the work just an ivory tower exercise?

Alexander the Great could have used a good hydrographic service. He nearly lost an army in his first encounter with a tidal bore. The Mediterranean, an inland sea, hasn't much tidal movement so Alexander, unprepared for the whims of the open ocean, thought the great wave was a manifestation of the disapproval of the gods. Julius Caesar learned about tides the hard way too, on his first visit to Britain.

Hydrographers, of course, do more than prepare tide tables. Mapping and charting has always been part of the job of exploring, and Captain Vancouver's hydrographers did such a good job around local waters that their charts are still valid in many places. West Coast hydrographers are constantly correcting charts and mapping more areas in the Arctic and Pacific.

Their tidal and current surveys are related to work carried out by ocean physicists, whose research ranges from ice physics in the Arctic to studies of current patterns in local straits. Ocean surface currents are being studied in co-operation with a French laboratory.

Studies of estuarine circulation and of the way in which water masses mix are just two more areas of research investigated by ocean physicists.

In these they are helped by ocean chemists whose information about radio-carbon content and salinity of water helps in tracing water masses.

If currents can be measured and tides predicted, then the information can help scientists predict the likely path of an oil spill, or a tsunami, or the probable course of industrial wastes or effluent dumped into the sea.

Chemists studying nutrient content can help biologists estimate the effect of sea changes on marine life.

Scientists don't have all the answers. While they have a reasonably good map of the ocean floor around Vancouver Island, they still don't know how Georgia Strait waters mix with the open ocean.

Is it necessary to know about the flushing of Georgia Strait?

Was it necessary to know what made Newton's apple fall on his head?

Non-Problems

It was concluded that the reef would continue to renew itself without human interference.

Non-problems tend to distract attention from more urgent questions. It is easy to see how a coral reef quickly became an international emotional issue while chemists' research — measurement of oceanic carbon dioxide by potentiometric titration, for example — fails to stir the imagination.

In fact it's enough to scare a reader right back to the comic page.

But the carbon dioxide content of the ocean is part of a very real problem: can the ocean and the biosphere absorb enough carbon dioxide from the air to prevent possible changes in climate?

Greenhouse Effect

Since the early 1900s scientists have wondered about the fate of huge amounts of carbon dioxide returned to the atmosphere since man first started burning fossil fuels — oil, coal, petroleum and natural gas.

If enough carbon dioxide remains in the air it is possible that the climate could become warm enough to melt the level of the ocean sufficiently to submerge coastal cities within the next century.

Scientists are not saying this will happen. They are simply saying that, because of the "greenhouse effect," it perhaps could.

This is one of the reasons Dr. C. S. Wong, head of the ocean chemistry division of the Marine Sciences Directorate in Victoria, and his colleagues are at present analyzing the 5,600 samples of sea water they collected during a scientific cruise across the Pacific in November, 1972.

Carbon Released

The connection between fossil fuels, the greenhouse effect and the chemistry of the ocean is found in the nature of our fuels. They all consist of carbon compounds produced by ancient or modern plants, and when they are burned carbon in the form of carbon dioxide is released into the atmosphere.

Throughout most of the half million years of man's existence on earth his fuels consisted of wood and other remains of plants which had grown only a few years before they were burned. The effect

Bishop Against Women Clergy

KINGSTON, Ont. (CP) — Bishop J. B. Creighton expressed opposition Tuesday to the principle of ordination of women to the priesthood as he spoke to the synod of the Anglican diocese of Ontario.

In his charge to the synod which opened in Kingston today the bishop was responding to the recent decision made by the Anglican church's general synod in Regina to admit women into the priesthood for the first time in the church's history.

"I report to you that I voted against this motion," Bishop Creighton told delegates. "I cannot as a bishop implement this decision in the diocese."

Every bishop in Canada reserves the right to refuse to ordain any candidates for the priesthood whom he feels unsuitable.

Despite the decision by general synod to approve in principle the ordination of women, it remains for each of Canada's 28 dioceses to decide individually whether or not to implement the principle.

Bishop Creighton, along with Rev. Henry Hill, also of Kingston, led opposition to the ordination of women at the synod meeting three weeks ago in Regina.

"It appears to me quite open to question as to whether after two hours of debate a general synod has the right by resolution to change a tradition of the church has been in existence for nearly 2,000 years," the bishop said.

Concern has been expressed by some Anglicans that the decision to allow ordination of women may have the effect of splitting the church.

"I have been greatly distressed since returning home (from Regina) to have had no less than four of our priests inform me that if the principle becomes a fact they would have to consider very carefully as to whether they could remain within the folds of the Anglican church."

Kickback King Sentenced to Poverty

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—William O. Wooldridge, once the highest ranking sergeant in the U.S. Army, today faces years of a monkish life—poverty and service to charity—as the penalty for the wheeling and dealing of the "Khaki Cosa Nostra."

A federal judge Tuesday sentenced Wooldridge and three others to sign over to the government almost all of their worldly goods and assets—including one man's house—and work free for charitable organizations.

"I want the defendants penniless," said U.S. district judge Warren Ferguson. "I want to make sure you don't have anything."

Wooldridge, 50, former Sergeant Major of the army, pleaded guilty last October to accepting bribes as part of a widespread net of kickbacks, graft and corruption involving the $4 billion a year operations of service clubs overseas, particularly in Vietnam.

Senate investigators dubbed the operation the "Khaki Cosa Nostra."

Wooldridge, of Junction City, Kan., was given a four-year suspended prison term and placed on probation for five years on condition he work without pay for a charitable organization for three years and sign over to the government all the present assets and any that may be discovered in secret bank accounts in the future "as long as you live."

The judge left the men their army pensions, and anything they can earn after completing the mandatory charitable work terms.

Former Master Sergeant William Higdon of McDonough, Ga., was ordered to give the government his home and all other assets, perform unsalaried charitable work for three years and was given a suspended prison term of five years and five years probation.

Sentenced to similar terms were former sergeants Theodore Bass of Pensacola, Fla., 38, and Seymour Lazar, 43, of Stuttgart, West Germany. Bass will have to do charitable work for only one year.

The judge conceded that the sentences were "unusual," but said the crimes were unusual. A defence attorney, Bruce I. Hochman, said he thought the sentence was illegal, but all the defendants agreed to accept the terms for probation.

The judge told the former sergeants he could not "tolerate any possibility of your benefitting from the fruits of this crime."

Higdon had conceded that he had deposited more than $300,000 in a secret Swiss bank account.

"I have to arrive at a method whereby the government can get back as much as possible," the judge said.

He delayed sentencing until after the men testified before a senate subcommittee investigating the service club corruption. The judge noted that Higdon had taken the fifth amendment in previous appearances before the subcommittee, and said he would take into account Higdon's cooperativeness in subsequent testimony in determining the sentence. Wooldridge's attorney noted he had spent 31 years in the army and won 24 decorations, including the purple heart and silver and bronze stars.

Hochman described all the defendants as men "with distinguished service records, but they're not overly bright."

VANCOUVER (CP)—The B.C. Federation of Labor Tuesday declared all Western Canada Steel Co. products "hot."

It urged all trade unionists to support the strike of United Steelworkers Local 3302 against the company in a bid for a shorter work week.

Although the company's complex has been shut down since March 14 by the steel union pickets, union spokesman Harold David said steel reinforced bars, stamped with the company's insignia, have been delivered recently to local construction sites.

The union will attempt to spot the locations and ask construction workers not to handle the steel.

No Compulsion To Sell Air Time

WASHINGTON (WP) — The U.S. supreme court ruled Tuesday that neither the constitution nor federal law require broadcasters to sell commercial air time for statements on matters of public controversy.

By a seven to two vote, the court held that radio and television broadcasters have been given "journalistic discretion" to deny access to the airwaves to "self-appointed editorial commentators."

The decision, delivered in an opinion by Chief Justice Warren Burger, was a crushing defeat for a recent legal movement to open the communications media — first the regulated broadcasters and later the newspapers — to more individuals and groups who wish to deliver their message in their own way.

Burger said broadcasters are still governed by the "fairness doctrine" of the Federal Communications Commission to present balanced over-all treatment of controversial issues, but that the FCC is justified in refusing to order the sale of editorial advertisements.

In dissent, Justices William Brennan and Thurgood Marshall said the ruling "reverses traditional First Amendment priorities" by giving fewer access rights to persons with a political message than to those with a commercial message.

"Any person wishing to market a particular brand of beer, soap, toothpaste or deodorant has direct, personal and instantaneous access to the electronic media," Brennan said. "Yet a similar individual seeking to discuss war, peace, pollution or the suffering of the poor is denied this right to speak."

Victims in two major test cases were the three broadcast networks, The Post-Newsweek stations and the FCC.

The losers were the Democratic National Committee, which sought an FCC rule guaranteeing air time for paid political spot advertisements, and the business executives, and the business executives move for peace which demanded air time on Washington radio station WTOP (a CBS-affiliated Post-Newsweek station) for its antiwar message.

Witness Says Own Life Threatened

Larry Shaw was told he'd be shot if he attempted to get help for the victim of an Esquimalt shooting Jan. 23, B.C. Supreme Court was told Tuesday.

John Howard McGee, 27, of 819 Condon, is standing trial before a jury of seven women and five men for the attempted murder of Charlie Scarr, 27, of 532 Dallas.

Crown witness Larry Shaw testified that he and Scarr were confronted by McGee and his girlfriend, Marilyn Gow, with handguns at McGee's home.

While McGee pointed a gun at Scarr, Miss Gow held a Derringer on Shaw with instructions to shoot if he moved, said Shaw.

Scarr advanced toward McGee and was shot. After the shot, Scarr wrestled the gun from McGee while Shaw disarmed the woman.

Scarr made his way outside and collapsed on the boulevard. Moments later Shaw, holding a Derringer, banged on some neighbors' doors and went back into McGee's to get the keys to Scarr's car.

As he was approaching the car McGee appeared on the front porch with a gun threatening to shoot if Shaw attempted to leave, Shaw testified.

"You've already shot him. Are you going to stop me from getting help for him?" asked Shaw.

Shaw went over to Scarr and noticed a police car at the end of the road. He ran to it and got help.

Before the arrival of police

Shaw had gone back into McGee's house where he found Miss Gow crying.

"What are you crying for, you bitch. You shot him," he said.

"As far as I'm concerned, she's as guilty as he is," Shaw told the court.

Under cross-examination by defence counsel Cecil Branson, Shaw admitted his wife — "a very nosy and curious person" — went to McGee's home for a drink about three weeks ago.

"She tried to pump McGee for facts about the circumstances of this incident, is that right?" asked Branson.

"Yes, that's right."

"And that was while the preliminary hearing was going on?"

"No, I don't think it was going on at that time."

"Did you have anything to do with this little incident Mr. Shaw?"

Welfare Worker Dismissed

The provincial government has fired a welfare worker in Vernon who was charged recently with two cases of fraud.

Douglas Gerald Hornberger was formerly a case aide in the department of human resources in Vernon.

He was charged March 2 with two cases of fraud. He was ordered dismissed under the terms of the Civil Service Act through a cabinet order released today.

DELICIOUS ROGERS' RECIPE

Frost your family's favourite cake with this luscious topping.

Rocky Road Frosting

4 tablespoons butter or margarine
1 ounce unsweetened chocolate
1/2 cup golden brown sugar, lightly packed
2 tablespoons Rogers' Golden Syrup
3 tablespoons cream
1/2 cup icing sugar, sifted
1/2 cup miniature marshmallows (or cut-up large marshmallows)

Place butter, chocolate, brown sugar, Rogers' Golden Syrup and cream in a saucepan. Bring to a boil, stirring constantly; boil hard 2 minutes (until bubbles are large and glossy). Remove from heat and mix in icing sugar and marshmallows, stirring until melted. Immediately spread over top of cake, letting it drip down sides. Garnish with pecan or walnut halves. This is enough frosting for the top of an 8" or 9" layer cake or square cake; or a cake baked in a 10" tube pan.

Vancouver Ends Secret Payoffs To Settle False Arrest Suits

VANCOUVER (CP) — Mayor Art Phillips said Tuesday city council's practice of settling citizens' false arrest claims secretly will end and in future such settlements will be announced publicly.

He said there have been a number of out-of-court settlements this year, largely due to citizens' claims of wrongful arrest arising out of the Gastown disturbance of August, 1971.

"I think it's proper to announce such settlements when they are made," the mayor said. "But discussions leading up to them would best be held in camera. . . I wasn't aware that announcements weren't made in the past."

Phillips' statement was prompted by reports earlier Tuesday that council was secretly paying off those who appear to have been falsely arrested. According to an alderman who revealed minutes of in-camera meetings and confidential reports, council members who support the secrecy apparently did so to keep false arrest publicity from lowering police morale and to avoid a rush of false arrest suits from other citizens who may not have legitimate cases.

He said one unrevealed settlement involved an award of $5,000 to a city couple arrested during the Gastown disturbance. According to a confidential law department report to council, there was no evidence to support the arrests.

Ald. Jack Volrich said he favors full reports of both false arrest settlements and the preceding discussions "except in special circumstances when the publicity might prejudice the city's case."

Ald. Harry Rankin advocated public announcements and discussions. He said council members appear to favor secrecy by a vote of seven to four, "but there may be a swing the other way."

City prosecutor Stewart McMoran said that unless there was a possibility of a criminal charge being laid his department would not be involved in wrongful arrest claims or their settlement.

Artist's conception of new B.C. Tel building

B.C. Tel Building

Tenders will be called in early July for construction of a new Victoria district headquarters building for B.C. Telephone in the 800-block Yates Street.

The new building, which should be completed by the end of 1974, will house offices now in the Blanshard Street location and also permit consolidation of other departments located in various buildings in the city, the company said.

The existing, Blanshard Street building will continue to be used for equipment and some administrative offices.

Site clearing of the office building on Yates Street will start in August.

RCMP Head Dodges Electronic Bugging Issue

OTTAWA (CP) — Solicitor-General Warren Allmand is willing to discuss RCMP electronic surveillance in government security before a third closed-door meeting of the Commons justice and legal affairs committee, it was revealed Tuesday night.

Commissioner W. L. Higgitt told the committee the RCMP does not conduct wiretapping or bugging in its pursuit of criminals, but he declined to answer when asked about "electronic surveillance." He called that a "wider question."

It is understood that the topic of "electronic surveillance" was involved in one of the two private meetings the committee has already had on the subject of government security.

As Conservative and New Democratic Party members of the committee pressed questions about wiretapping, chairman James Jerome (L. — Sudbury) and Higgitt said Allmand is willing to appear at another "private committee meeting."

The committee is shortly to start considering the government bill to outlaw wiretapping except for police and security matters.

In most cases, police would require permission from a provincial attorney-general, or the solicitor-general and a judge, to apply wiretapping or other devices to individuals or groups.

But in emergencies, police could apply bugging devices with permission from the attorney-general or the solicitor-general. But they would have to obtain permission from a judge before the evidence so obtained could be used in court.

The commissioner said he was under some difficulty because government employees are not expected to discuss operational technicalities in public.

But asked about "electronic surveillance" he mentioned two court cases, one on the west coast, in which electronic bugging was involved.

Questioned by Stuart Leggett (NDP — New Westminster) and others, Higgitt said organized crime is increasing by many percentage points.

The RCMP encouraged other police forces to attack this type of crime in an organized way and special RCMP groups were working in some areas of the country.

In answer to questions from John Gilbert (NDP — Toronto Broadway) the commissioner said there is a tremendous increase in the use of drugs among 19-to 25-year-olds.

Gilbert asked if the RCMP pay students who report on drugs in high schools and other places.

"Perhaps, on some occasions," Higgitt replied. He assured Mr. Gilbert the RCMP does not interfere with student affairs on campuses. But it did use information from students. "We'll accept information from anybody," he said.

NEW STUDY ORDERED Fishermen Favor Canadian Route

OTTAWA (FP)—Transport Minister Jean Marchand has ordered a second, more intensive study to be made on the possibility of extended shipping operations from the port of Churchill, Man.

In replies to questions in the House of Commons Tuesday from Manitoba MP Keith Taylor (PC—Churchill), Marchand said he had handed over a first report prepared by the National Harbors Board to his own department's marine administration branch and asked it to prepare a second report.

However, despite a request from Taylor the transport minister refused to make the original report public.

The minister didn't elaborate on why he found the first report unsatisfactory and why he wanted a second report preparing by his own officials.

Appealing to Marchand to make the first report public, Taylor told the Commons that the standing parliamentary committee on transport and communication had voted in favor of releasing the Churchill documents.

WASHINGTON (FP)—Oil spills from tankers carrying Alaskan crude oil to refineries in Washington State and California could wipe out the salmon and shell fish industries of the Pacific Northwest, congress was told Tuesday.

Testifying before the house public lands sub-committee, a Washington spokesman for Alaska's commercial fish-men said that his group favors construction of a trans-Canadian pipeline from Alaska down the Mackenzie Valley to the mid-western United States.

Saunders Hillyer told the sub-committee that he feared massive oil spills by the huge tankers that would take on two million barrels of oil daily at the Alaskan port of Valdez for delivery to refineries to the south, if a pipeline is built from Alaska's north slope oil fields to the south coast of the state.

Hillyer is Washington representative of the 450 commercial fishermen who make up the membership of the Cordova District Fisheries Union. He said he was also appearing on behalf of United Fisherman of Alaska and the western division of the National Federation of Fishermen.

In addition to oil spills resulting from possible collisions and grounding of tankers, Hillyer said there would be "chronic pollution" of Prince William Sound in Alaska from the pipeline terminal itself.

The 'Old Man' of 55: Our Craziest Waste

Mr. Bobby Riggs, the tennis player and gentleman burglar, is said to be on his way to making a small fortune from the simple proposition that a clean old man with enough cunning can conquer any woman champion on any court any time.

Having proven his theory with the crushing 6-2, 6-1 defeat of Margaret Court, Mr. Riggs is now beaver-busy whipping up interest for more of the same, including a challenge from Billie Jean King, a process that should earn him the undying hatred of every man or woman on the far side of a 50th birthday.

Mr. Riggs is 55. He, himself, is responsible for the description "old man." Indeed he has gone even farther, asking that he be accepted into a women's tournament because, as he put it, "After all, sex for most men ends at 55." That there's been no public outcry at this idiotic remark is attributable entirely to the fact that it reflects with only too much fidelity our North-American culture. Men or women beyond 50 are considered old, are considered to be nearing the end of their sexual life.

It is the one fact of life on this continent that continually amazes and confounds the Europeans who come here to visit or live. They find that men or women who are middle-aged, by European standards, who are at the peak or their powers mentally and still in possession of their physical vitality are considered to be over the hill.

As for those who have reached the retirement age of 65 there's a kind of banishment that represents a scandalous waste of humans.

Tony Jones, writing in the current Harper's, notes, "Thus quarantined, their experience invalidated, the old have become 'senior citizens', burdensome anachronisms sequestered in nursing homes, retirement villages, and spare bedrooms. As we are lately discovering, however, their numbers are so great and the isolation so effective that the old represent a subculture in their own right."

Mr. Riggs is "old" at 55. But Picasso was experimenting with new ideas in his 90s. Titian was nearly 100, still painting, when the plague took him. Bertrand Russell's last book came out when he was 91. Verdi composed Falstaff at 80. Santayana published Dominations and Powers when he was 87. Ho Chi Minh was successfully running a beleaguered nation at 79, an age now being approached by Mao Tse-tung. Churchill kept on until he was 80 and De Gaulle until he was 79. Charles Chaplin, looking ahead to his 85th birthday, is busy putting together a new film.

A Canadian reporter, on assignment, say, in Amsterdam or Zurich or Bonn or Florence, finds that his interviews with the leaders in business, labor, the arts or government are with men whose average age is at least 60, whose eminence is established by an acceptance that wisdom, sagacity and the art of decision-making come only with age and experience. Just the opposite is true in our North American culture.

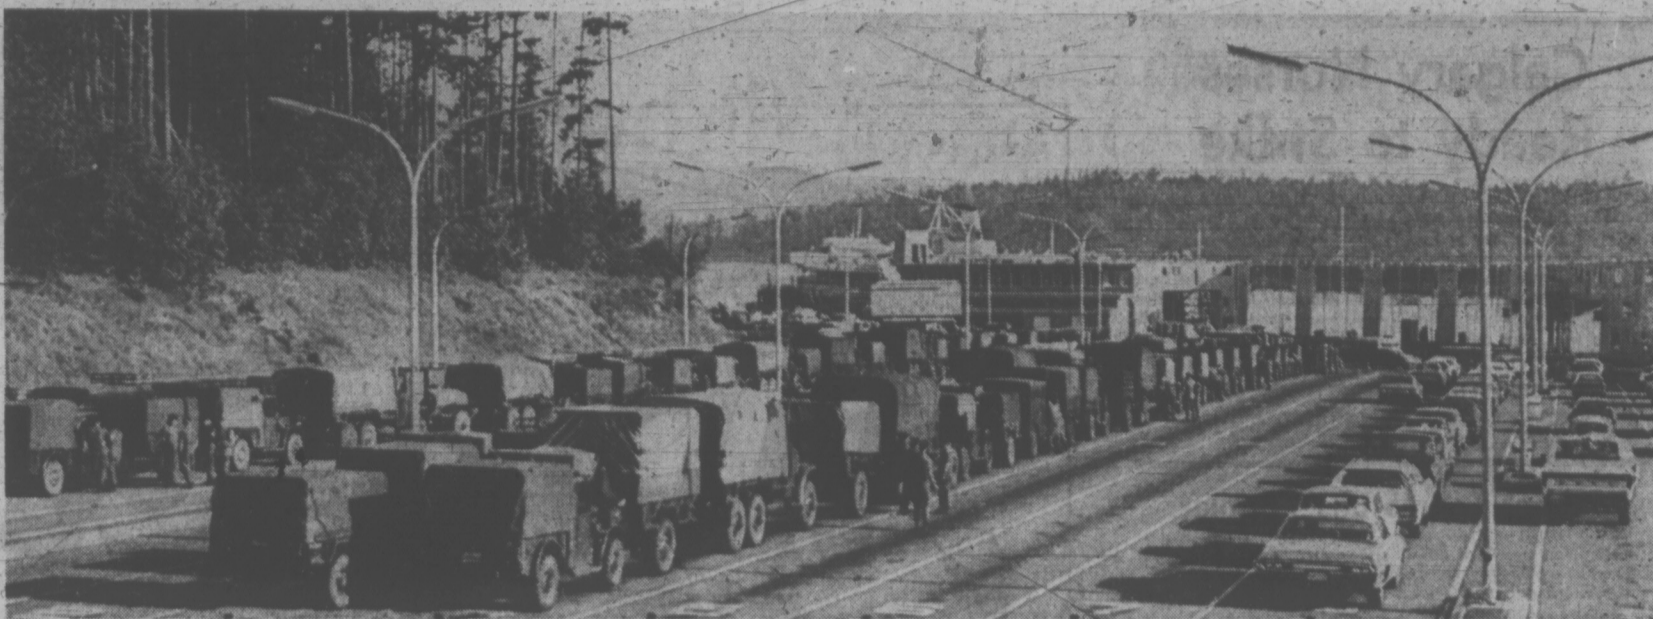

The problem is compounded on this continent by the fact that more people are living longer every day, that the average life-span is in a constant process of expansion. Thus the numbers of people rejected by society or considered to be an unproductive part of it become more significant every day. The longer they live, it seems, the more they are considered a burden.

Curiously enough, the North American concern with age is not to harness it for the good of the community, but simply to stretch it as far as it will go. Longevity is an obsession. What to do with the extra years is hardly considered.

In its current examination of this phenomenon Harper's offers us reports on the incredible ages reached by inhabitants of sheltered, tranquil communities in the Greater Himalayas, the Caucasus and the Andes where hundreds of birthdays are common and a surprising number of men and women live a quarter of a century beyond that mark.

These articles document patterns of diet and exercise, but the common denominator is a respect for the aged. The greater the years, the greater the prestige. "It is a rewarding and possibly life-extending," writes one authority on the Abkhazians, "to be needed and respected at 90 or even 110."

That surely is the element that's lacking in North America where the fear of age, the fear of being dispensable, of being patronized or without respect or purpose, accelerates the aging process and makes an "old man" of a 35-year-old.

NOT REALLY AN INVASION, just force from the 3rd Battalion, Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry, awaiting ferry at Swartz Bay this morning en route to annual spring exercises at

Messages From God Cost $100

A 23-year-old man who interrupted his trial Tuesday to spout messages from God was fined $100 for contempt of court today in provincial court.

Allan D. Laatsch, 316 Menzies, was charged with assaulting a police officer March 22.

He said in court Tuesday he had just one thing to say — that Const. Doug Potentier "was the son of the devil ... and the enemy of all that is good."

The outburst came after Provincial Court Judge F. S. Green asked Laatsch if he wanted to cross-examine Potentier.

Potentier had testified Laatsch had hit him in the mouth, kicked him in the leg, and tried to gouge out his eyes.

Court took two intermissions to allow Laatsch to think over the incident and decided if he wanted to apologize.

But after each recess, he refused, saying "I've been told by God to say it and I've said it."

The trial continued today.

Repairs Set On Caisson Gate

Yarrows Ltd. has been awarded a $63,946 contract to repair the caisson gate at the Esquimalt Graving Dock, federal Public Works Minister J. E. Dube has announced.

The hardwood on the gate, one of two which shut off the drydock, is deteriorating and will be replaced with Australian gum wood, a Yarrows spokesman said today.

Critical Lack of Nurses May Force Bed Closures

By DON VIPOND
Times Staff

A shortage of registered nurses this summer could force both of Victoria's general hospitals to "shut down" beds, spokesmen said today.

Royal Jubilee and Victoria General Hospitals now anticipate being short 72 nurses by the end of June.

A scarcity of registered nurses through the summer is an annual occurrence as many quit to take holidays, travel or be with their children when school is out. But the shortage this summer is shaping up as more severe.

Administrations from both hospitals will meet in two weeks to plan co-ordinated action.

In past years, Victoria General has had to shut down whole wards for lack of nursing staff. If Jubilee has to shut down beds this summer, it will be for the first time.

Can't Spread Staff Too Thin

Jim Fair, executive director at Victoria General, said 20 to 40 beds may have to be taken out of circulation.

The alternative is spreading staff so thin the level of nursing care is threatened, he said.

The hospital will be short 36 registered nurses by July. About 250 R.N.s are employed at Victoria General.

At Jubilee, executive director A. C. Pickles said the hospital hopes to avoid closing down beds but "it may become inevitable."

Nursing director Elizabeth Moore said Jubilee is short 23 registered nurses now and a projection indicates the hospital will also be short 36 by the end of June. There are about 400 R.N.s employed at Jubilee.

The problem is compounded by the shortage including some specialty areas, she said, such as operating room and psychiatric nurses.

Pickles said that the meeting between the two hospitals on the problem is being held so that "whatever we do, we'll be complementing each other."

'Think Big' on Fees

Saanich should "think big" when it sets fees for re-zoning applications, Mayor Hugh Curtis said today.

At present there is no charge for staff work involved in the process of changing zoning for proposed developments.

Tuesday night, council's planning committee recommended a fee schedule—nominal for individuals seeking single lot zone changes and rising substantially for apartment and large commercial developers.

There is no reason householders should subsidize commercial applications, particularly when the value of a subdivided lot was being raised substantially in the process.

Curtis suggests something in the range of $100 to $150 for apartment developers.

'Days' Profits Stand at $16,000

The non-profit Victorian Days society stands to profit by more than $16,000 from last week's three money-making ventures.

The biggest single profit is expected from the Penny Farthing Inn, a two-night beer-drinking operation in the city-owned Memorial Arena.

Finance committee chairman David Baird thought final figures would show a profit of $8,000 to $9,000. The figure would be about three times the profit Baird says was planned by the organizing committee.

Only 2,000 were expected at the Inn, Baird claimed in an interview today, although he admitted that 3,000 beer mugs were purchased.

An entrance charge of $2.50 per person, which included one of the mugs until they ran out early on the second night, gave the entrant the privilege of sitting at a trestle table drinking bottled beer at 50 cents each.

Entertainment was provided free to the organizers by the Rothmans cigarette company.

Citing an approximate attendance of 5,500 persons Baird said gross income from the Inn operation "would not be too far off" $20,000.

He said he could not name an approximate figure for outlay on arena rental, insurance, staffing at union rates and drink supplies, but he predicted profit would only be around the $9,000 figure.

The arena was rented at reduced rates allowed by the city to non-profit organizations. Baird said he did not think the Penny Farthing Inn counted as a profit-making operation because it was run by a non-profit group.

"We decided late last year when the Victorian Days was about to fizzle out that this year it would break even. We had to raise money somehow."

He said the $2.50 fee to the Inn was reduced to $2 when the mugs ran out. Display advertising attributing the entertainment to the cigarette company "did not materialize," Baird said, adding the local company's representative was "quite happy about it."

Baird said sing-along entertainer Fran Dowle told audiences the entertainment was courtesy of the cigarette company.

Baird said he did not pay to enter the Inn because he was working as an organizer. He denied that the entrance fee was excessive for a show that had been provided free to the organizers.

A tremendous amount of volunteer work went into organizing the Victorian Days, he said, and, with a sum set aside for 1974, will break even instead of losing $10,000 as it did in 1972.

The Penny Farthing Inn was organized by city recreation administrator Jack Morgan, Baird said.

Asked about his philosophy about Victorian Days and its basic function, Baird said he thought it was "a period of celebration and community interest in the month of May which would hopefully be of interest to tourists but which was primarily done for the people of Victoria."

"It's a fun thing to do."

The 40 organizers all worked for nothing putting in long hours over a long period, he said.

The two other ventures contributing to the society's anticipated profit were:

The Bikathon, netting an anticipated $2,500.

A Plate Dinner, organized by the Chamber of Commerce bringing in $5,000.

Baird said the society's bank account is at the Canadian Bank of Commerce and all income is audited.

The Victorian Days Committee is part of the Loyal Order of Victorian Enthusiasts formed two years ago to "promote" Victoria.

ADVICE ON THOSE MURALS ... JUST TRY THEM OUT

A two to three month trial period for the controversial murals in Gorge Road Hospital would be a "reasonable compromise," Colin Graham, director of the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria, said today.

"Try them out for a few months," advised Graham.

"Then, if the elderly people still don't like them, that's a different case."

The hospital has threatened to obliterate one or more of four murals painted by artist Luis Merino in four dining rooms of its new extended-care unit.

Merino has been painting the semi-abstract murals, each covering an entire wall, since February, financed by a Local Initiatives Project grant.

The murals are now finished and Merino will turn them over to the hospital

GRAHAM

... a compromise

Thursday. He said today he will photograph them before he leaves.

Hospital administrator Bill Morrison said today there has been no final decision on the murals.

Complaints from hospital staff and relatives of patients prompted Morrison's earlier warning the murals may be obliterated.

"I think he's done a sincere and well thought out job," Graham said of Merino's work.

"I think the problem seems to be the majority of those who are seeing them are over 70," he said. The semi-abstract style "comes as a bit of a shock to them."

Graham said he knows other cases where initial reaction to an abstract painting was negative, but after a few months of exposure, the viewers grew to like it.

Command Change Set June 21

Rear-Admiral Reginald Pickford will take over command of maritime forces Pacific from Rear-Admiral R. H. Leir in a change of command ceremony 3 p.m. June 21 in CFB Esquimalt.

The ceremony will take place on the parade square of the Canadian Forces' Warrant Officers' School.

Leir will assume his new post in Ottawa as chief of maritime operations July 1.

Pickford has been serving as military attaché in Washington, D.C.

Let's Have It in Writing

"Rap sessions" with the public are too confusing and Saanich will revert to the written word in an attempt to discover what kind of neighborhood Cedar Hill Park area residents really want.

Council's planning committee will send out a questionnaire to all residents in the area surrounding the golf course — on both sides of the Saanich-Victoria boundary.

Aldermen said the views of Victoria residents should also be considered because they too are obviously involved.

Mayor Hugh Curtis said "Our experience with public meetings on planning is not sufficiently refined that we should try it again in this area."

He pointed to heated citizen meetings on Gordon Head development, and to a public hearing on apartment development in the east Cedar Hill area.

He felt personal interviews and question forms would fill the same purpose.

"But eye-ball-to-eye-ball discussion is where you get valid comments," said Ald.

... golfers favored

Edith Gunning, suggesting the planners put material on display at Cedar Hill Community Centre.

The debate prompted discussion on whether Cedar Hill Park provides public enjoyment or concentrates on golfers.

Ald. Leslie Passmore said he had heard criticism that council leaned toward the "golfing fraternity" and not enough toward public usage. He has been asked when a pedestrian walk around the course would be provided.

Ald. William Noel, chairman of Cedar Hill golf course management committee, said planners should take into account a proposed professional survey to consider realignment of the course.

He added: "Some people think golfers have two heads. This is not the case. Most golfers are normal people. We are maintaining open space for future generations and it's (the course) is paying for itself and subsidizing some of the other recreational activities."

Calgary Nurses Ready to Strike

CALGARY (CP) — The city's 88 public health nurses have given notice they will go on strike Thursday unless the city agrees to pay them higher wages.

Nurses' spokesman Bob Donahue said they offered to provide free emergency services during any strike but the city declined.

The nurses, who voted last week to go on strike, staff city baby clinics, the inoculation centre and take care of home and school visits.

School Tour Stuns Premier

RED DEER (CP) — Premier Peter Lougheed and Health Minister Neil Crawford admitted Tuesday being shaken and stunned by a tour of a school for mentally retarded children.

Crawford said orders will be issued immediately to speed up a major reconstruction program at the school as fast "as humanly possible." Money will not stand in the way of the reconstruction, he told a news conference.

The premier and Crawford visited the Alberta School Hospital for Mentally-Retarded Children. It accommodates 845 and has a waiting list of more than 300.

Easy Home Purchase Plan

THOMPSON, Man. (CP) — Party Leader L. H. Asper said Tuesday a Liberal government in Manitoba would introduce a plan to help residents to purchase a first home.

Asper said the Home Ownership Made Easy (H.O.M.E.) plan is designed to provide every Manitoban with a grant of up to $750 as a down payment on a first home.

Judge Clamps Down on Drinkers

WINNIPEG (CP) — Provincial Judge Robert Trudel signalled a get-tough policy against drinking drivers Monday, sending two first offenders to jail for two months each.

Judge Trudel said fines are not having the deterrent effect needed and he is "not going to wait until an impaired driver kills a little boy or girl coming out of school."

Deaf Given 'Phone' Link

EDMONTON (CP) — Edmonton has become one of the first communities in Canada to have an emergency service for its deaf population hooked into police headquarters.

Teletype machines have been set up in the homes of 28 of Edmonton's estimated 250 deaf persons. More will be added in the future.

By calling a special number, the police switchboard operator will place the ringing telephone in a cradle and the deaf person then types his message onto his home machine.

Free Milk Plan Studied

WINNIPEG (CP) — The Manitoba government is studying ways of distributing free milk to underprivileged families and in particular to remote communities in northern Manitoba to supplement the diet of native peoples.

Premier Schreyer said the government is "very anxious" to distribute free milk to certain classes of society, but noted transportation and spoilage problems in shipping whole milk to northern communities. He suggested powdered milk as a suitable alternative.

Average Drunk Analyzed

EDMONTON (CP) — The average person convicted of impaired driving in Edmonton is a male, blue-collar worker with a Grade 5 education.

He's a white Protestant, less than 35 years old, married, has two children, and earns approximately $100 a week.

He began drinking between the ages of 16 and 24, drinks beer — from six to 12 bottles at a sitting, which he does two or three times a week.

The description was given at the Canada Safety Council's annual meeting by Paul Zelhart, a researcher for the provincial government's impaired driving project.

He based his conclusions on a 15-month study of impaired drivers between September, 1970, and December, 1971.

Reisz Back to Camera To Direct the Gambler

New York Times
NEW YORK — Karel Reisz, considered one of Britain's brightest directorial talents because of his smashing success several seasons ago with "Saturday Night and Sunday Morning" and "Morgan!", has been depressingly absent from the film scene since 1969, the year of his butchered but beautiful "The Loves of Isadora."

But Reisz will soon be back where he belongs — sort of. Although he won't be churning his cameras along the Thames, he will be shooting a movie in Las Vegas. Reisz, who has shied away from Hollywood for a long time, apparently received an offer he couldn't refuse from Paramount. So, starting in June, he will direct "The Gambler," a drama based on an original screenplay by James Toback about an English Literature teacher at the City College of New York who is bitten by the gambling bug and lights out for Las Vegas.

"I would have preferred to do the film in London," Reisz relayed from Hollywood, "but obviously, it had to be done here. The fact that the hero gambles with his money in Las Vegas is not the meat of the story. It's really the portrait of a man who gambles with his life and his feelings, and through his compulsive drive to gamble, he is also forced to test those closest to him — his mother, his grandfather and his girl."

In these enlightened times, it would be rare indeed for a woman to sit back and complacently watch her husband win an Oscar without suddenly wanting to get out there and win for herself. But the truth is that Francoise Ruddy — spouse of producer Alfred Ruddy, whose "The Godfather" won an Academy Award as the best film of 1972 — has long been eager to join the ranks of producers. And now she'll get her chance, with an independently filmed version of "Seduction of the Minotaur," Anais Nin's 1961 novel about a woman who leaves her husband and flees to Mexico, where she attempts to sort out her troubled life — with the aid of a mystical doctor.

Mrs. Ruddy and Georgeanne Heller, her co-producer, have assigned Johanna Demekras to write the screenplay, and they hope to have "Seduction of the Minotaur" moving along in Mexico and Paris later this year.

Invasion of privacy — hardly a remote issue in our society — is the focus of "Extreme Closeup," a National General film which is due to open here shortly. The story — written by Michael Crichton and directed by Jeanot Szwarc — is, according to producer Paul Lazarus III, "the study of the inner tensions of a man who becomes a voyeur through his entanglement with long lenses, directional microphones and the like." We've certainly come a long way from the early days of "Candid Camera."

U.S. Students Stay

HALIFAX (CP) — Canadian taxpayers subsidizing American students in this country's universities may be getting a bigger bargain for their money than many nationalists would have you believe, reports a study of the situation.

The study, carried out at Dalhousie University here by John Stringer, a third-year political science student, suggests the Americans who take advantage of the subsidies are unlike Canadians themselves.

The results of Mr. Stringer's survey show that these U.S. students have personal ties with the area they study in; they stay in Canada following graduation with either landed immigrant status or as naturalized Canadians, and they are not members of "leftist" groups displaying dissatisfaction with current U.S. social trends.

Mr. Stringer began the study with the hypothesis that American students came to Canada to study to get away from a "sick society" of violence, possible induction into the armed forces, economic conditions and war.

The results, says Mr. Stringer, "were surprising."

MAJORITY AIM TO STAY

Only 19 per cent of the American students surveyed expressed total disenchantment with American society. Almost half the respondents said they came to a Canadian university because of personal reasons.

This group was broken down into several smaller groups, 12.2 per cent of whom listed their personal reason as having relatives in Nova Scotia or other parts of Canada. Almost five per cent said they came because their parents graduated from Canadian schools.

Almost 10 per cent said they had previously lived in Canada and wanted to return and an equal proportion said their parents had previously lived in Canada.

One-quarter of the respondents said they had friends in this country.

Other results were just as surprising, said Mr. Stringer.

About 72 per cent said they planned to remain in Canada to work and 73.2 per cent said they planned to take out landed immigrant status or apply for Canadian citizenship.

Graduate students were more apt to take out Canadian citizenship than undergraduates, the report showed, and graduates were more concerned with academic pursuits than personal affairs as a reason for going to a Canadian university.

ANTI-THEFT 'BRANDS' DESIGNED

WINNIPEG (CP) — Manitoba will soon have in operation a double-barrelled anti-theft system.

Called Operation Identification, the system is designed to facilitate the identifying of lost or stolen articles, and to discourage thefts.

Winnipeg Police Chief Norman Stewart says he anticipates a substantial drop in thefts because of the new system.

Citizens who wish to participate are loaned electric marking pencils from a local police station or fire hall. They "brand" their belongings with the pencil, using a personal symbol such as a driver's licence or social insurance number.

Television sets, radios, cameras and other valuables can become readily identifiable.

Chief Stewart said if a person is stopped with an item bearing someone else's marking, "he will have a lot of explaining to do."

If the thief attempts to erase the marking, he will leave a suspicious-looking mark on the item.

BILLY MacMILLAN
... goes to Islanders

NHL Trades Injure Habs' Future

By CANADIAN PRESS
"Right in the middle of lambing season, too," Billy MacMillan said Tuesday night from his farm at Southport, P.E.I. He was referring to the National Hockey League trade announced earlier in the day that sent him to New York Islanders from Atlanta Flames.

"I'm not too disappointed," said the rugged 30-year-old left winger who has found himself the surprised man out for the second time in as many years. "I enjoyed Atlanta, but I'm really looking forward to New York."

MacMillan went to the Islanders to complete a Feb. 13 trade in which the Flames received defenceman Arnie Brown for another left winger, Ernie Hicke.

MacMillan had been left unprotected by Toronto in last year's draft.

Montreal Canadiens, meanwhile, continued to insure their future by trading off talented players to have no team for unnamed players and future considerations.

Shortly before the Tuesday midnight trading deadline, the Stanley Cup champions uploaded defenceman Bob Murdoch and minor leaguer Randy Rota to Los Angeles Kings for a player to be named later plus a future amateur draft choice.

In another deal, the Canadiens sent defencemen Dale Hoganson and Bob Murray along with right winger Chuck Arneson to Atlanta. In return, they'll get a player to be named later and future considerations.

Hoganson had already signed a contract with Quebec Nordiques of the WHA after spending most of the 1972-73 season on the Montreal bench.

Earlier, the Canadiens traded minor leaguer Tony Featherstone to Minnesota North Stars for a player to be named later.

Canadiens' general manager Sam Pollock, who engineered the various trades, already has in hand a number of early round draft choices.

Toronto traded defenceman Larry McIntyre, 25, and minor league forward Murray Heatley to Vancouver Can-ucks for goaltender Dunc Wilson.

The March trade sent centre Terry Crisp to Philadelphia in return for defenceman Jean Potvin whose brother, Denis, was the No. 1 selection in the NHL's recent junior draft.

Islanders, by virtue of their record 60 losses against only 12 victories in the 78-game season, took the younger Potvin and were reported to have signed him to a multi-year contract valued at $200,000 a year.

One of the stipulations the highly-regarded Potvin made while still playing with Ottawa was 675 of the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A Series was that he wanted to play with his brother.

The Toronto trade was included at a news conference in which the Leafs announced the signing of their second and third selections from the recent junior draft-defencemen Bob Neely and Ian Turnbull.

Their No. 1 choice, winger Lanny McDonald of Medicine Hat Tigers of the Western Canada Hockey League, was in New York conferring with his agent, Richard Sorkin.

Ignored in Aid Program, Keating Shatters Record

A young fellow who wasn't considered good enough to get a government grant to pursue his chosen athletic endeavour, is the new holder of the Canadian record for the hammer throw.

Victorians who may remember Murray Keating well for his feats at Mount Douglas High School, could be well advised to consider him as one of Canada's leading lights for the 1976 Olympic Games in Montreal. At his present rate of progress it is not out of the question.

It was two weeks ago in California, where Keating — who Monday celebrated his 21st birthday — while competing against some top-class Americans at Long Beach, set his new Canadian record of 209 feet, bettering the former mark of 205' 3" held by Mike Cairns of Vancouver.

Then last weekend at a place called Arkadelphia, Arkansas, he captured the NCAA title with a throw of 200' 11". Those are his latest credentials.

"I guess they didn't think too much of me," he said philosophically of the turnaround of his request for financial aid. "Yes, I had to pay my own way to Long Beach where I trained with some American soldiers. But I may get some help from the B.C. Track and Field Association," he added of other competitions planned for this year.

Those goals are dead ahead. First is the AAU championship at Bakersfield, Calif., in June; then the Pan-Pacific meet here in July, followed by the Canadian championships at the Summer Games in Burnaby in August. After that, hopefully there will be selection to the Canadian team for the Commonwealth Games in New Zealand next year.

This calls for a tough conditioning program which will continue all summer and consists basically of throwing, running, weights, and film studies, totalling five or six hours a day. The Simon Fraser University student may throw the hammer up to 40 times a day, but when on the weights, perhaps only 25. "I also have to practice 'winds' and 'toe turns,'" he explained.

'Strength, Speed, Technique'

If Keating may be considered small by the usual standards — he is six feet tall and weighs 207 pounds — he would like to add about 30 pounds. "More weight would help," he said, because throwing is primarily strength, speed and technique. The loss of co-ordination between the three on any one throw can make a difference of about 20 feet. I could use the extra strength."

Besides, the present world champion, Anatoli Borodachuk of Russia "is about my size," he grinned, "but 30 pounds heavier." His mark is 247' 8". The world record is 250' 8" and is held by Walter Schmidt (6' 4", 290) of West Germany.

For Keating, it's been a case of improving a little each year. Last year he was throwing between 187 and 194 feet. This year he started with a heave of 196' 2" and has averaged 201' 5".

Along the route he achieved the personal distinction and thrill of defeating U.S. Olympic and world star, Harold Connelly. "I was fourth at 202", and he was fifth at 199' 7" at the Mount San Antonio Relays." Connelly holds the Canadian Open record of 215' 4".

Keating has considered steroids as a means to his end. "Every athlete does," he suggested, "so why not talk about them? It is up to the individual. Sure, there are tremendous strength and weight gains to be had, but with what I know I'm not too thrilled about them, and not sure about their use either."

"They do help and can't be detected," he added. "But there are other things in life."

One of these, for Keating, is the Olympics. "That is my goal, the '76 Games," he said, "ever since I watched them in 1968."

If he has one minor peeve, it could be a pre-judgment on the Commonwealth Games. "They say they are only taking medal winners," he said. "Right now I'm about sixth in the Commonwealth; I'm that far out of the medal class even if I am a good distance behind the current champion, Barry Williams of England, who has a throw of 229' 7". The three or four ahead of me are so close that perhaps on a given day I could beat them. We can only improve through that type of competition," he offered. "It might pay off; if not now, later."

MURRAY KEATING... starts windup for toss

Meanwhile, caution is the byword for motorists on McKenzie Ave., near Centennial Stadium. That's where Keating works out. And if a hammer suddenly comes bouncing across the road, stop and congratulate the thrower. Because it will be near a world record.

"Not that I think I can do it," Keating laughed, "but I measured the distance to the road, just in case, and its about 250 feet so I know what I have to do."

Gordie Howe 'Interested' In Playing With Sons

DETROIT (AP) — Gordie Howe, Detroit Red Wings' legendary No. 9, says he might be back on the ice next season along with his two sons, playing for Houston Aeros of the World Hockey Association.

"I have always said I would like to play at least one year with my boys," Howe, 45, said Tuesday night in a telephone interview with The Associated Press.

"They seem quite interested in the whole family."

Howe's sons, Mark, 18, and Marty, 19, were drafted by the Aeros recently and Howe said he and his sons will be in Houston next week to talk about the boys' contracts.

"We've had some preliminary conversations and while they were talking about the boys they asked me how I'd like to get back on the ice," said the highest scorer in National Hockey League.

"We'll be talking about the boys' contracts," he added.

"And about the possibility of one for me?"

"I don't know. They're so damn many ifs... but, I'm definitely interested."

The elder Howe was drafted by Los Angeles Sharks in the original WHA draft a year ago.

How does Howe, Howe and Howe sound for one line?

"Very good," Howe said. "I like the sound."

Gordie and Mark are both forwards. Marty is a defenceman.

Howe retired from the Red Wings at the end of the 1970-71 season after 25 years with the club. During those years he made the NHL record book look like a personal testimonial.

Even though the Aeros are interested in all three Howes, Gordie says there will be "no family plan" or "reduced group rates."

When Howe retired from the Wings, the club retired No. 9.

Will he ask for that number if he goes back on the ice?

"I don't know," he said.

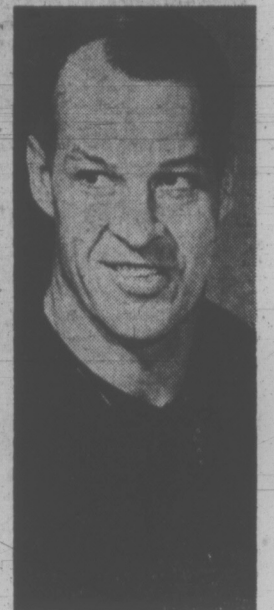

"They might have to issue 9, 9A and 9B."

Howe says he definitely would like to play again.

"Playing with my boys... it would be the thrill of a lifetime."

"I'm definitely open-minded and they seem to be definitely interested."

"So, I'm going to listen. Hell, I'd be a damn fool if I didn't."

Vickers Wins Calder

MONTREAL (CP) — Steve Vickers, a 30-goal scorer in his first National Hockey League season, was named Tuesday as the winner of the Calder Trophy, awarded annually to the NHL's top rookie.

The 22-year-old New York Ranger rightwinger received 103 points compared with 74 for runner-up Bill Barber in the voting conducted by representatives of the Professional Hockey Writers' Association in the 16 NHL cities.

Right winger Bill Harris of New York Islanders received 48 points; Jim Schoenfeld, the rugged Buffalo Sabres defenceman, was next with 46 and Daniel Bouchard, a goaltender with Atlanta Flames, got 42. In all 15 players, representing 12 NHL teams, received votes. Points were awarded on the basis of five for a first choice, three for a second and one for a third.

Vickers' win in the Calder voting marked the first time in 19 years that a member of the Rangers has been recognized as the NHL's top rookie. Camille Henry won the award in 1954 after scoring 24 goals in his rookie season with New York.

In 62 games this season, Vickers scored 30 goals and 23 assists for 53 points, the most ever scored by a Ranger rookie, surpassing by six the total recorded by Henry in 1954.

One of the things Vickers did in his rookie year was score three goals in consecutive games against Los Angeles Kings Nov. 12 and Philadelphia Flyers Nov. 15. It was the first time that feat had ever been performed by a first-year player in the league.

He was injured in a game against Pittsburgh as Penguins' defenceman Darryl Edestrand nailed him with a solid check. The resulting leg injury kept him out of action until Dec. 24.

Vickers, who stands five feet, 11 inches and weighs 180 pounds, played his junior hockey with Toronto Marlboros of the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series. In his final year with the Marlies he scored 107 points and was New York's first draft pick in the NHL's draft of overage juniors in 1971.

Vickers, 37th holder of the trophy, will get $1,500. Barber will get $750 as runner-up.

Following are the complete voting results:

Steve Vickers, NY Rangers, 103; Bill Barber, Philadelphia, 74; Bill Harris, NY Islanders, 48; Jim Schoenfeld, Buffalo, 46; Dan Bouchard, Atlanta, 42; Greg Sheppard, Boston, 36; Phil Russell, Chicago, 34; Hillard Graves, California, 16; Henry Bouchard, Detroit, 14; Vic Venasky, Los Angeles, 5; Thommie Bergman, Detroit, 4; Ray Comeau, Atlanta, 3; Chuck Leffey, Montreal, 3; Tom Bladen, Philadelphia, 1; Wayne Staddon, St. Louis, 1.

Nirmal Rejoins Ranjit In Shamrock Lineup

Nirmal Dillon has had second thoughts about retiring from lacrosse and he'll be in the Victoria Shamrocks' lineup when they play Coquitlam Adanacs tonight at 8 in Memorial Arena.

Nirmal, who with brother Ranjit Dillon formed a potent Shamrock scoring combination for several years, announced at the start of this Western Lacrosse Association season that he was retiring from the game.

However, Shamrock coach Ed Kowalyk said this morning Nirmal had been working out and "he wants to play again."

Also back from last year's lineup and making his first start this season with the Shamrocks will be Ken Alexander, brother of Frank Alexander who has played in five of the Shamrocks' six games to date.

Kowalyk said, too, that rookie Chris Hall returned from hospital in New Westminster Monday and was "back home feeling fine."

Hall suffered an eye injury and a fracture of a bone in the nose when hit in the right eye by a ball during Victoria's game against the Salmonbellies last Thursday.

Kowalyk said it would be some time before Hall would be back in action.

Shamrocks will be seeking to extend the home-floor win streak by WLA clubs when they tackle the Adanacs tonight.

Vancouver Burrards made it 12 wins in a row for home teams Tuesday night when they downed Salmonbellies 11-7 to move into a first-place tie with Adanacs.

Bruce Todman, with two goals and three assists, led the Vancouver attack and Gord Fredericksen had one goal and three assists.

It was a tough, defensive contest, marred by 121 minutes in penalties handed out.

Ward Sanderson of the Burrards picked up 44 minutes in penalties, including two 10-minute misconducts and a game misconduct after being involved in three fights.

Jackson, Lewis Enter Grid Hall

HAMILTON (CP) — Russ Jackson, Leo Lewis and Moe Lieberman have been elected to the Canadian Football Hall of Fame, it was announced today.

Jackson and Lewis, two of the biggest names of their day, were elected to the player's section while Lieberman was elected to the builder's section.

Jackson, now a school principal and television commentator, was one of the most brilliant Canadians ever to play the game. As quarterback of Ottawa Rough Riders he was named the top player in the game three times.

As well as being a superb football player, Jackson, 36, was a bright boy in the classroom. In his last year at McMaster University he declined a nomination for a Rhodes Scholarship.

He turned to professional football and led Ottawa to the playoffs in the Eastern Conference in all 12 seasons with the club. They won the Grey Cup in 1960, 1968 and 1969, the last year he played and the last time Ottawa made the final.

Lewis, nicknamed the Lincoln Locomotive, played 11 seasons with Winnipeg Blue Bombers, making all-star six times.

He was nominated as Canada's outstanding player five times, but never won the award.

The slashing runner still holds the Canadian Football League record for kickoff returns with 187—there's no one even close.

Lieberman, a lawyer, was born in Kingston, Ont., but played his football in Western Canada—for University of Alberta and Edmonton Eskimos, retiring in 1921.

However, he's been associated with the Eskimos through the good and bad years and was club president in 1955 and 1956 when the club won Grey Cups.

Foyt Good Weather Judge

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — A steady drizzle Tuesday washed out the Indianapolis 500-mile race for the second straight day—the first time in the 57-year history of the event that it has happened.

Rain today threatened to wash out action for a third day.

Thirty-one of the 32 remaining cars in the starting field managed to get in a parade and pace lap Tuesday before the rain returned.

One of the original starting field of 33, David (Salt) Walther's No. 77, was missing from the lineup. It was the only car damaged seriously in Monday's multiple-car wreck.

Walther was seriously injured in the accident not nine seconds after the false start of the race.

Speedway officials and drivers were apologetic in their remarks about the second washout.

Chief Steward Harlan Fongler told the second-day crowd of more than 175,000 that he waited for 4½ hours before calling the race, hoping conditions would improve.

"We have a very dangerous situation here. The track is not safe," Fongler said. The powerful, turbocharged championship cars cannot run safely on a wet track.

A. J. Foyt Jr., a three-time winner at Indy, apparently was a better judge of weather than the race officials. He changed out of his driving uniform and left to eat a meal at the nearby Speedway VIP suites several hours before the official announcement was made.

Foyt was one of three drivers fined $100 each Tuesday for improving their position before Monday's aborted start. The others were Steve Krisiloff and Peter Revson.

Fongler handed out the fines and also recommended that the U.S. Auto Club impose a stiffer fine against the three. The maximum fine he could impose, however, was $100.

"It may be that I passed one or two cars before the starting line," Foyt admitted. "I passed most of them after the starting line. But they (the officials) are in better position to see than I was. It's their decision and I'll accept it."

None of the three was directly involved in the spectacular wreck.

The first rain delay Tuesday wasn't bad for everyone.

A brake hose on John Martin's McLaren had been seared in the Monday wreck and gave out on the parade lap Tuesday.

Martin had to go into the pits and would have missed the start of the race. The repair was made with the help of pole-sitter Johnny Rutherford's chief mechanic, Hughie Abalom, and some USAC officials, who helped Martin's crew get a new hose.

Martin was asked whether the delays made him edgy. His reply apparently expressed the sentiment of most of the drivers, some of whom sailed a Frisbee in the pit area or napped during the long wait.

"I don't get nervous," Martin said. "I just get sleepy."

Wayne Weber scored three times for Esquimalt while Basil Rouault, Malcolm Bolduc and Brian McKinnon got two goals each. Other scorers were Ross McKinstry, Rick Leggett, Steve Buckley and Lance Hobbs.

Jeff Ranger, with three goals, topped the Nanaimo scoring. Rick Sage and Jeff Frketch got two goals each and Kevin Woodburn scored once.

Deane also had an assist and another player with an eight-point night was Rick LaPointe, who scored four goals and added four assists.

Ralph's Cigars Taste Great

RON BLOMBERG
... leading hitter

By The Associated Press
That long-absent Yankee power reappeared in New York Tuesday night, battering Oakland A's 7-1 with four home runs, two of them by Graig Nettles.
Roy White and Bobby Murcer hit the other Yankee homers and Ron Blomberg, baseball's leading hitter, raised his average to .404 with two hits.
It all made manager Ralph Houk's post-game cigar taste terrific.

"Our offense has reached the point where it scares people, especially right-handers," said Houk, grinning.
Elsewhere in the American League Tuesday night, Boston Red Sox edged California Angels 2-1, Baltimore Orioles trimmed Kansas City Royals 3-2, Minnesota Twins shut out Milwaukee Brewers 1-0, and Cleveland Indians outslugged Texas Rangers 9-7. Detroit Tigers game at Chicago White Sox was rained out.

nia's fireballing right-hander. Cepeda connected in the second inning after Reggie Smith drew a walk. The two-run homer wiped out a 1-0 Angel lead and centre fielder Smith protected the slim edge by cutting down Ken Berry trying to score the tying run in the seventh.

Baltimore squeezed past Kansas City with Brooks Robinson singling home Paul Blair with the deciding run in the eighth inning.
Bobby Darwin boomed a leadoff homer in the seventh inning and that was all Bert Blyleven needed to pitch Minnesota past Milwaukee.

Blyleven allowed just six hits and pitched his way out of a jam in the bottom of the ninth.
Cleveland outlasted Texas in a slugfest. George Hendrick had three hits and three runs batted in for the Indians while Alex Johnson had three hits for the Rangers, who lost their 17th game in the last 23 starts.

April brought nothing but showers for St. Louis Cardinals. But seven days in May have the Redbirds flying high again.
The Cardinals, who dropped 12 of their first 13 starts and left April with a 3-15 mark and a solid hold on last place in the National League East, ran their winning streak to seven games Tuesday night with a 2-0 victory over Cincinnati Reds at Seipio. Spinks and Diego Segui combined for a 12-strikeout five-hitter.

It also was their 10th triumph in 11 games and lifted them out of the cellar for the first time since April 8. They climbed one-half game ahead of Philadelphia when Los Angeles Dodgers whipped the Phillies 9-3.
Elsewhere, Tom Seaver fired a three-hitter and struck out 16 as New York Mets downed San Francisco 5-2 and cut the Giants' lead to one-half game over Los Angeles in the West Division. Chicago Cubs trimmed ex-boss Les Durocher's Houston Astros 7-1 and Pittsburgh Pirates beat Atlanta Braves 6-1 in other games.

Greater Victoria Lakes Under Branch Scrutiny

George Reid, Vancouver Island regional fisheries biologist for the fish and wildlife branch, reports a three-year study on lakes in the Greater Victoria area is now underway. Initial investigations centre on Prospect, Elk and Beaver lakes but Reid plans to encompass as much in the research project as time and money will allow. In addition to a creel census, the study will attempt to classify the recreational use of each lake and catalogue the conflicts between each use. Another aim will be to determine the relative contributions of hatchery-reared and naturally-bred trout stocks to the angler catch. Stomach contents of bass will also be examined to see to what extent trout are utilized for food.

Ian Smith, the regional wildlife biologist, passed along a message that 11 of those transplanted geese have returned to the Nimpkish Valley after spending the winter as far away as Oregon. Hopefully they will nest and re-establish a viable population.

Bill and Verne Palliser turned the Victoria Fish and Game Protective Association's annual salmon derby in Saanich Inlet into a family affair Sunday. Bill captured the Chinook Trophy with a nine-pound, 10-ounce catch. Verne, his father, took the Coho Trophy with a 3.11-pound blueback. Distaff anglers got in the act too. Sheryl Smith captured the junior prize with a catch weighing 3.06 and Arla Smith was second with a 6.12 spring. A total of 22 chinooks and 22 blues were weighed in by 32 fishermen. But there was no record of the number of fishermen who were skunked.

Federal fisheries announced Tuesday the $50 per ton dogfish bonus will be renewed for the 1973-74 season. But the bonus of an increased herring quota for boats taking dogfish will be discontinued. A total of $500,000 has been set aside for the next program, designed to crop the excess population of "dogs". This past season 4,680 tons of dogfish were landed - including 3,920 tons from the Strait of Georgia - by 157 boats. Twelve canneries were involved in purchasing the catch for a further $30 per ton. Removal of the herring incentive makes this idea even more palatable than before.

Remember next Tuesday is World Environment Day?

Some rambling notes along the trail:
Recreationists who happen to stumble on a forest fire need to exercise a little common sense to deal with the situation. If the fire is small and smouldering, try and keep it from spreading and send someone else for help. If you are alone or the fire is raging, get word to the nearest forest service ranger station at once. Telephone operators will provide the number and the forest service will "gladly pay the bill" if a long distance charge is involved. While reporting, explain the location of the blaze and the nature of the material (grass, brush, trees etc.) being burned.

Victoria Four Wheel Drive Club is planning a rally for the go-anywhere crowd on June 24. Starting time is tentatively set for 10 a.m. from Colwood Shopping Plaza on Sooke Road. Gordie Stewart promises a "couple of interesting hills" will be included on the 100-mile course around the southern end of the Island. Gordie can be reached at 478-3155 for further particulars.

Gun control legislation currently being proposed in Ottawa is aimed at the wrong target. It singles out legitimate users of guns and places extra strain on police departments, which would have to carry out the "red tape" administration. Those concerned should write a letter to their Member of Parliament. Make the letter concise and to the point. A flood of personal letters means a lot more than collections of names on a petition.

BUGNER BOUT FOR FRAZIER

LONDON (AP) - Former world heavyweight boxing champion Joe Frazier will meet European titleholder Joe Bugner here July 2.
Jarvis Astaire, British closed-circuit television impresario, said Frazier would receive $125,000 plus half the United States television rights for the fight.
It will be Frazier's first fight since he lost the title to George Foreman in January.

Farmers Harvest Early Run Crop

Farmer Construction took advantage of early opportunities Tuesday to harvest a big group of runs and come away with a 15-5 Victoria Senior Baseball League decision over Greaves Movers at Lambrick Park.

Farmers struck for seven runs on two singles in the first inning as losing pitcher Terry Karpluk, who suffered a wild streak, gave up three bases-on-balls and hit two batters.

Farmers then added six runs on six hits in the third frame.
Barry Moen led Farmers at bat with two singles on four

ACE OF ROADRUNNERS BANNED FOR SEASON

Scoring star Brian Tasker of Richmond Roadrunners has been suspended for the rest of the season, Pacific Junior "A" Lacrosse League commissioner, Wally Donaldson of Vancouver, has announced.

Tasker was suspended for hitting a referee in last Saturday night's game between Richmond and Coquitlam J-Hawks.

Most-valuable player in the circuit last season, when he scored 38 goals to help Roadrunners take the league title, Tasker was among the leading scorers this season.

Danes Outclass Canadian Team

JAKARTA (CP) — Canada's Thomas Cup badminton team was completely outclassed by Denmark Tuesday. The Danes took a 4-0 lead in the nine-match semi-final series to be completed today. Svend Pri and Elio Hansen, Denmark's top singles players, scored easy victories. Pri won 15-8, 15-4 over Jamie Paulson of Toronto while Hansen beat Bruce Rollick of Vancouver, 15-6, 15-5.

Stockers Keep Lead

Stockers North Americans remained atop the Victoria Senior Women's Softball League by defeating Esquimalt Combos 10-3 Tuesday in one of two games at Hyacinth Park.

In the other encounter, Karen Thompson struck out 10 batters and yielded only two hits as CAV Electronics moved into second place with an 18-1 decision, over B.C. Telephone.

Ticehurst Starred In Golf, Lacrosse

VANCOUVER (CP) — Bert Ticehurst, one of British Columbia's top amateur golfers and a 10-time member of B.C.'s inter-provincial Willingdon Cup team, died Tuesday in hospital.

Ticehurst, 43, had been ill for several months with cancer.

The former lacrosse star turned to golf in the mid 50s after playing on two Canadian champion Mann Cup teams.

He reached the Canadian amateur golf final in 1963, losing to Nick Weslock. He won the B.C. amateur crown in 1964.

Ticehurst was a member of a record five championship Willingdon Cup teams and represented Canada in several Americas Cup and Commonwealth competitions.

He is survived by his wife, Velma, a daughter, Linda, 13, and a son, Brett, 10. Funeral service will be held Friday.

Jesse Steals Show As Stars Inducted

VANCOUVER (CP) — Jesse Owens emerged as the star of the show Tuesday night at the annual British Columbia Sports Hall of Fame banquet of champions.

Owens, the great American sprinter who won four gold medals at the 1936 Olympics in Berlin and ruined a summer for Adolph Hitler, told the audience of 1,000:

"We went to run... run we did. We had a marvellous time... so sorry he didn't."

Don Meredith, former Dallas Cowboy football star, told the young athletes at the head table to "be happy with your achievements and enjoy the trip."

Of the five athletes being inducted, only figure skater Karen Magnusson was absent. She is in France.

Others entering the Hall of Fame were:

—Jim Davies, Canada's cycling champion in 1928; a member of this country's 1928 Olympic team and winner of many major provincial cycling events.

—Irene MacDonald winner of 15 Canadian diving championships, six U.S. national titles and two Mexican championships. She also won British Commonwealth games medals and a bronze in the 1950 Olympics.

John Samis, an internationally-ranked badminton player in the 50s, who won three Canadian singles titles.

—Ted Hunt, an all-rounder who played pro football with B.C. Lions, lacrosse on two Mann Cup championship teams, was on the Canadian ski jumping team, was undefeated as a college boxer and considered one of the finest rugby players produced in B.C.

LADYSMITH PITCHER SIGNED BY MONTREAL

Right-handed pitcher Art Fransen of Ladysmith has been signed by Montreal Expos of the National Baseball League.

The 18-year-old Fransen, six feet one inch, and 180 pounds, will be assigned to Jamestown, the Expos' farm club in the New York-Pennsylvania League, about June 10.

Fransen, who graduates this weekend from Ladysmith High School, plays for Domans in the 18 to 18-year-old Senior Babe Ruth League in Ladysmith.

Seaboard Steps to Top

Seaboard Construction took over first place in the Stuffy McGinnis men's Softball League on Tuesday by tripping Mike's Sport Shop 6-1 at Heywood Avenue Park.

In the other game, Labatts blanked CFB Esquimalt 4-0 at Central Park.

Barry Wilkin pitched the Seaboard victory, striking out eight batters, allowing no bases on balls and scattering five hits — including a solo home run by Bob Butterworth in the sixth inning that spoiled his shutout.

Long hits paved the way for Seaboard scoring as Scott Sinclair and Bob Reid tagged doubles. Wayne King bashed a triple and Brian Greston produced a bases-empty homer.

Don Funk was outstanding for the Labs.

Funk was in on two of the three double plays produced by alert fielding. He also had two hits in four trips to the plate, scored once and drove in one run.

SWEDISH WHIZ KID STRIKES AGAIN

PARIS (AP) — Bjorn Borg, 16-year-old Swedish tennis sensation, conquered United States Davis Cupper Dick Stockton 6-7, 7-5, 6-2, 7-6 Tuesday with another display of Open championship.

The boy's latest success — his third over world class players in less than a week — carried him into the last 16 of precocious skill in the French of the tournament.

Tom Gorman of Seattle, Wash., reached the quarter-finals and Chris Evert of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., moved into the last eight in the women's event, but Borg was the hero again.

at Summer Special Price

$589<sup>95</sup>

It is becoming more and more apparent that the service on a colour TV, over the life of the TV, can cost more than the TV's original purchase price. Also there are more and more people that will gladly sell you a colour TV but when it comes to service they will refer you to someone else. In the last five years we have proven to many customers how inexpensive colour TV maintenance can be. How?

1. We preselect the sets that we sell—looking at many different aspects of quality and performance. Two sets made by the same manufacturer may be quite different in reliability and performance. Since we work with technicians we know the quality of the sets we sell.
2. Since we service all the sets we sell and know them very well, we can keep maintenance costs down to a minimum.

Do you pay more for a set purchased from us?

Our overhead is no smaller than other companies... but we do not have salesmen, as such, that waste time when not selling. When we are not busy discussing your TV needs with you, our customers, we are busy servicing TV's. Our aim is to sell for less.

If you were thinking about a colour TV but have not yet decided on the right one for you, why don't you drop by soon and see what we can offer you?

Wraps Come Off Food Oil Wrangle

OTTAWA (FP.) — The still-smoking, and at times in the past the bubbling, controversy about possible long-term hazards to humans from certain food oils, may soon end. If not that, at least the "scientific" cards will soon be on the table, in public view.

Health Minister Marc Lalonde confirmed Tuesday outside the Commons that he has finally received the report of his special advisory committee on food oils containing "long chain fatty acids" — for Canadians, that means mainly marine oils and rapeseed oils used in such products as margarine, cooking oils and salad dressings.

The special advisory committee, composed of non-government food experts, recently completed what health department officials describe as a "thorough review of all relevant scientific information" on the human health implications of the various food oils.

The review had been sparked last fall by reports that even the new Canadian rapeseed varieties low in the long chain fatty acid, erucic acid, seemed to cause fatty infiltrations in animal experiments and might therefore pose hazards for humans.

Tuesday, it was learned that recommendations for government action, based on the advisory committee's review, are now being prepared for the health minister.

... But Never On Sunday

By MORT ROSENBLUM
 NUKU'ALOFA, Tonga (AP) — You can kiss her on a Monday, Tuesday, a Wednesday, etcetera. But try it on a Sunday in Tonga and you might end up in jail for two years.

It is against the law here to be frivolous on Sunday. Any form of work is forbidden, even watering the lawn. And most Tongans wouldn't have it any other way.

When Wesleyan missionaries converted King George Tupou I in 1831, they did it well. Today virtually every Tongan is a Christian and most go to church at least twice on Sunday.

Not much happens during the week, anyway, in these friendly, relaxed little South Sea islands, or in their Wild West Victorian capital of Nuku'alofa.

But on Sunday, nothing happens at all.

Townfolk and tourists crowd into the nondescript Century Free Wesleyan church of Tonga where some get to watch King Tautua'ahu Tupou IV dozing occasionally behind dark glasses.

Stirring Polynesian voices, helped along by a French horn and two trumpets, belt out a Tongan version of Rock of Ages from the choir loft located on straw matting on the main floor.

MUST KEEP DAY HOLY

Meanwhile, other Tongans pray in 45 Mormon chapels scattered around the islands. And still others attend services in Roman Catholic, Anglican and Seventhday Adventist churches.

No one is required to be in church on Sunday, but everyone is bound by the constitution and some lesser statutes to keep Sunday holy.

A constable saw some smoke rising from a backyard copra drying shack deep in the bush late last year, and he caught a man red-handed stoking a fire. The culprit got six months in jail.

Old-timers recall how once workmen trying feverishly to fix electric generators for the hospital and the wireless station were arrested for laboring on Sunday.

Until recently the constitution ordered: "The Sabbath day shall be sacred forever and it shall not be lawful to do work or play games or trade on the Sabbath."

An amendment was added to allow the cabinet discretion to bend the rules for such cases as the emergency landing of aircraft.

Legislators debated further changes, such as letting taxis take sick persons to the hospital, but it was decided enough was enough and Sunday should remain undefiled.

SHOUTING RULED OUT

There are clear lines on the books: You can call "sail-ho" but cannot shout in vain or beat on a tin can. You need permission from the mayor to fire your gun. You must make certain your stallion abstains from any procreative activity.

Another law—with an eye toward ecumenical calm—makes it illegal for rival churches less than 300 yards apart to hold services at the same time.

The business of Christianity is the major industry on Tonga.

The Mormons have been particularly successful missionaries in recent years and claim 25-30 per cent of all Tongans with 50 or 60 new baptisms every month.

Mormon Mission President Charles Woodworth says direct and indirect payments by his church account for 75 per cent of the government's revenue.

Officials put the figure lower but agree it is a sizable chunk.

Much of the Mormons' annual expenditure of more than $2 million goes for salaries to Tongans doing construction and other projects.

Tongan and foreign critics say the money is distorting the traditional economy. Some add that mission education is turning out little American schoolchildren instead of little Tongans.

But most Tongans, from the king on down, say the Mormons and other missionaries are making valuable contributions to the country in spite of their weak points.

All in all, people in Tonga worry about change. Six days a week.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

A 21-year-old girl who admitted stealing to finance a drug habit that ended 2½ weeks ago was sentenced in provincial court Tuesday to four months determinate and four months indeterminate.

Judge William Ostler said Marlene E. Andrew, of 135 West Burnside had got herself "into a hopeless situation" and badly needed some counselling assistance.

He said she would serve her term at the Lower Mainland Regional Correctional Centre.

The shoplifting charge originated April 27 when the girl stole clothing worth $40 from the Theatrical Costume Studio and sold the items for $8 at Chelsea Antique Store.

A 23-year-old mother of two who pleaded guilty to possession of marijuana, but claimed she was carrying it for someone else, was given a suspended sentence and six months probation.

Mrs. Gloria Cairns, 907 Cloverdale, was stopped by police May 19 in the 500-block Yates.

"It's unusual to see a lady like you in court on a charge like this," Ostler said, adding he was "glad to hear" Mrs. Cairns did not use the drug herself.

A pre-sentence report was ordered on a 79-year-old man who offered no reason for unlawfully opening letters written to other residents at 1024 McClure.

Court was told C. H. Harrison, was in the process of moving out of his suite when the missing letters were found open among his possessions.

Ostler said he took a "grave view of the interference" in the mail system, and ordered the pre-sentence report be presented to the court June 19.

Wayne H. Price, 20 of 1565 Elgin, was fined $75 for possession of marijuana after being checked by police May 29 at 2:15 a.m. on Richmond.

For possession of one cap of MDA May '79, Naida J. Cox, 19, of Kitimat, was fined $75 and given two weeks to pay.

L. B. Myers, of no fixed address, was sentenced to one month in prison when he pleaded guilty to a breach of probation charge.

Myers was put on six months probation March 27 for possession of marijuana for the purposes of trafficking.

Richard V. Fraser, 25, was remanded in custody until June 5 for pre-sentence report after he admitted possession of 19 caps of heroin Oct. 12.

Fraser, who has a previous conviction for the same offense, admitted driving up to 638 Simcoe and fleeing when police entered the residence.

Police said he dropped an orange balloon containing the drug.

B. C. Thors, 18, of 2866 Inlet, was fined $300 and prohibited from driving for three months, after impaired driving May 29 on Elgin Road.

A 29-year-old Metchisin resident will be sentenced June 15 for his part in a $321 robbery April 11 and for assaulting a police officer March 16.

Daniel Nicklos Makow, 4075 Metchisin, was remanded by Judge F. S. Green after he was found guilty on Monday.

The robbery with violence charge was laid after two men, posing as members of

4 Guilty In Drug Case

Four Victoria men changed their plea to guilty in county court Tuesday to possession of 179 grams of hash on Nov. 21.

The four — Bruce Murray Robinson, 19, of 950 Cowichan; Horst Gunter Schulz, 19, of 916 Wilmer; Martin Charles Rolston, 24, of 4500 Edgewood; and William Simon VanBourgonien, 23, Yukon Territory — were remanded by Judge M. L. Drake to June 14 for sentence.

A house at 525 William St., in which all four were living, was raided by Victoria drug squad members and the drug was found.

A charge of possession of hash for the purpose of trafficking was originally laid but was reduced after agreement by counsel.

Quebec Crash Kills Four

MONT-JOLI, Que. (UPI) — Four men were killed Tuesday in the crash of an Air Gaspé DC3 in a heavily wooded area near this far northern Quebec community.

The four were identified by Quebec Provincial Police as a Captain Schad, 25, the pilot; co-pilot Lesly Cumming, 25; Roger Doucet, 25, and passenger Emery Gall. Schad, Cumming and Doucet all worked for Air Gaspé.

the narcotics squad, asked a car owner for identification in the 1000-block Wharf.

As the driver took out his wallet, he was hit and robbed of $321.

Makow was also found guilty of assaulting Colwood RCMP Cpl. S. L. Bailey on March 16 when the officer searched a car driven by Makow and confiscated two bottles of whisky.

Court was told there were two 15-year-old females, and two males in the car besides Makow.

Bailey testified Makow "struck me under the chin hard enough to click my teeth together and shove my head back."

Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Speaker Lucien Lamoureux Tuesday neatly side-stepped what could have developed into an outright confrontation in the House by saying he was willing to leave a matter concerning use of unparliamentary language in abeyance until it could be looked at from a less emotional point of view.

Lamoureux was referring to a hassle in the Commons Monday when Newfoundland MP John Lundrigan (PC—Gander-Twillingate, called Environment and Fisheries Minister Jack Davis a liar.

Then, going against Parliamentary tradition of a century, Lundrigan refused to withdraw the slur and again charged the British Columbia minister with knowingly misrepresenting the Progressive Conservative party's tradition policy on fishing limits.

While most observers were expecting Lamoureux to again order Lundrigan to apologize—something the Maritimes MP swore he wouldn't do and thus create an outright confrontation—Lamoureux skillfully admitted that sometimes MPs come under considerable stress and pressure. But, he said, he thought members should be able to express strong views and to oppose other members vigorously without having to resort to offensive expressions.

At the same time, he pointed out that the rules and traditions of the Commons were established by members themselves and that they could be changed if MPs felt the rules to be no longer relevant.

On Monday, Lundrigan had repeatedly called Davis a liar charging that he had told a New Brunswick audience the Liberals were in favor of a 200-mile fishing limit but that the PCs would be satisfied with only a 50-mile limit.

Lambton Appears on Drug Charges June 13

LONDON—Lord Lambton, one of the two cabinet ministers who quit last week after admitting associations with prostitutes, is scheduled to appear in court June 13 to face drug charges, it was announced Tuesday.

Police issued three summonses against him last Wednesday, the day he announced the reason for his surprise resignation as a junior defence minister.

Lord Lambton is accused of possessing cannabis and a number of amphetamine tablets.

The other minister to resign last week was Lord Jellicoe.

Police said Tuesday they wanted to interview the call girl at the centre of the British ministerial scandal, 26-year-old Norma Levy, who was reported Monday to have left Morocco for an undisclosed destination.

Mrs. Levy was quoted in some newspapers Sunday as saying that a third and possibly a fourth government minister were involved in the scandal.

NEW YORK—Honey blonde sex star Marilyn Chambers hugged a large box of Ivory Snow to her bosom, describe herself as a "clean cut, all-American, wholesome girl," and said her contract to peddle the detergent had been renewed for 10 years.

But Procter and Gamble of Cincinnati, makers of Ivory

Snow, said it was "actively moving ahead" to replace the soap boxes that carry a photograph of Miss Chambers cuddling a baby.

Miss Chambers, meanwhile, said she wanted to do serious movies. While waiting for that, however, she said she had made a film, "The Resurrection of Eve." She said it was better than her first film, "Behind the Green Door," because "it has a story line from beginning to end."

She rejected the suggestion that the title be changed to "Deep Soap."

OTTAWA—Western Liberal leaders will confer today with Prime Minister Trudeau here as a prelude to a meeting in Calgary in July. The Liberal leaders are David Anderson, British Columbia; Robert Russell, Alberta; David Stewart, Saskatchewan, and I. H. Asper, Manitoba. Asper will be represented by Senator Gildas Molgat, a former Manitoba Liberal leader, because of campaigning for the June 28 Manitoba election.

The Calgary meeting is on economic opportunities.

BAKERSFIELD, Calif.—A Bakersfield man has been arrested after allegedly threatening to saw off his ex-wife's head with a power saw. The saw malfunctioned, witnesses told police Tuesday, so he beamed her on the head with it. Carl Myers, 51, was charged with assault with a deadly weapon after his arrest at the Red Rooster Tavern owned by his ex-wife, Gloria Wats, 38. He was freed on $2,000 bond.

LONDON—Canadian-born Sir Edwin (Ted) Leather, appointed to succeed the assassinated governor of Bermuda, said today he and his family are "happy and delighted" and have no fears about living in Government House there.

Leather, 54-year-old former Conservative member of the British House of Commons, was named Tuesday night to succeed Sir Richard Sharples, shot dead while walking in the grounds of the governor's mansion in March.

Leather was born in Toronto and raised in Hamilton, Ont.

NEW YORK—CBS fired the president of its record group Tuesday and accused him of charging more than $90,000 worth of private bills to the company.

The executive, Olive Davis, president of CBS-Records Group, which includes Columbia Records was paid $359,000 in salary and special compensation last year, CBS said.

The company brought a complaint in Manhattan Supreme Court accusing Davis, LONDON—Angela Lansbury came home to London Tuesday night to star in the American musical comedy Gypsy and received one of the most rousing first-night receptions here in recent years.

Miss Lansbury, a veteran Hollywood and Broadway star, grew up in London but has worked almost exclusively in the United States.

Her performance in Gypsy was the first time she had appeared in a musical in London.

OTTAWA—John Gordon Laschinger of Toronto has been appointed national director of the Progressive Conservative party. The announcement was made Tuesday night by Donald Matthews, national president.

Laschinger, 30, is a native of Montreal. He has worked as a computer manager since 1968.

He succeeds Liam O'Brien, who resigned recently to return to private business.

WOBURN ABBEY, England—It was, as Bill McDonald said, indeed a bit of a disgrace.

A Scot again lost a haggis-eating championship to a Portuguese.

"It's a bit of a disgrace," said McDonald, 58, after finishing second to Jose Pereira in the contest. "I can hardly believe it."

Haggis is Scottish national dish and is the heart, liver and lungs of a sheep boiled with oatmeal and served and eaten in the sheep's stomach.

Pereira, a stockbroker who lives in London, won the championship last year and this time, he did it even faster—knocking five seconds off his old time by devouring his haggis in 61 seconds.

"Haggis is delicious," Pereira said. "I could almost eat another one."

MONTREAL—The three surviving Dionne Quintuplets marked their 39th birthday Monday with their families in suburban St. Bruno.

Annette, Cecile and Yvonne, born in Callander, Ont., in 1934, all live in St. Bruno, 15 miles south of Montreal.

STOKE-ON-TRENT, England—Chris Marks said that an automobile distributor has agreed to strip down the engine on his new car to remove a sandwich a worker apparently left inside.

SEATTLE—Rock 'n' roll performer Alice Cooper has been released on a promise to post bail of $50 within seven days after being cited by city police for disorderly conduct at a concert.

"At the end of the show, he (Alice Cooper) approached the crowd with a rolled up poster in his hand and offered the poster as a prize for whoever could shoot the best insult," police said. "For three or four minutes it was just a contest of whoever could shout the worst obscenities."

MOVIE NOTES

Richard Harris On Gulliver Tour

NEW YORK Times—Gulliver Travels again! And so does Richard Harris, the Irish actor, whose partially completed Spanish western, Rialta, was recently headed off at the pass because of production difficulties, has been signed to star in a live-and-animated musical version of Jonathan Swift's Gulliver's Travels. Producer Josef Shafel reports that Don Black's adaptation of the 18th-century classic will soon go before the cameras at London's Pinewood Studios under the direction of Peter Hunt. American National Enterprises, headed by Raeburn Van Coalsen, will distribute the film; a service they are also providing for Shafel's recently completed musical edition of Alice in Wonderland.

Director Black, who wrote the lyrics for Alice, has done the same for Gulliver. And John Barry, Alice's composer, will also make the journey to Lilliput. The animation will be done by a Belgian company called Bevelision.

Daniel Selznick is fast following in his famous father's footsteps. The son of the late producer David O. Selznick will team up with Joel Glickman to produce The Karanov Equations, based on the novel by Marshall Goldberg, director of medical education at Hurley Hospital in Flint, Michigan. Filming is scheduled to begin next fall in Paris.

For those who couldn't bear the suspense of Goldberg's thriller, the story deals with an American surgeon who is called upon to save the life of a Russian physicist. The catch is that the Soviet patient is on the verge of discovering something really big—an atomic weaponry system capable of destroying the world.

The question is, will our guy let their guy stop the world, or will he make him get off?

We have another doctor in the house—Dr. Marcus Welby, sometimes known as veteran actor Robert Young. The other day, Young let it be known that he will soon be moonlighting from his popular TV show and returning to the movies for the first time since 1964, when he appeared in the not-so-popular Secret of the Incas.

What's his new flick? Would you believe a remake of the 1945 Enchanted Cottage, a romantic drama which starred Young as an air force pilot who falls in love with a painfully shy girl played by Dorothy McGuire.

"This time, the setting will not be World War II, of course," says Young, "and Dorothy and I will not be playing the leads. We'll play the parts of the housekeeper and the blind pianist, done by Mildred Natwick and Herbert Marshall in the original."

And maybe they can get Dr. Welby to take a look at that pianist's eyes?

The Expensive Alternative

Private Schools Offer 'Something Different'—Headmaster

By LINDA HUGHES
Times Staff

Alternative schools are becoming the rage in public education, but Hugh Wilkinson says his school has been offering a viable "alternative" for generations.

Shawnigan Lake School for Boys is a 58-year-old institution on a sprawling 160-acre campus of lush gardens, forests and playing fields.

In ivy-covered buildings and modern concrete complexes, 165 teen-aged boys follow an independent school education that is both traditional and wide-ranging.

Its effort to combine community, home and school life under the umbrella of one education program presents a forceful alternative to public education.

But it's an expensive alternative.

Tuition fees at Shawnigan Lake School total more than $3,000 a year, and only boys with average or better intelligence are accepted.

"The independent system is a set of alternatives," says headmaster Wilkinson, "each school has something different."

While Wilkinson admits interest in private schools has been dropping in recent years, he says it's been picking up lately, especially in the less expensive day-schools.

What kind of alternative does an independent school offer to attract parents to spend such a large amount of money?

"Public schools come under a lot of criticism that isn't really fair," Wilkinson says, "because learning comes about as much through the home and community—and now there are terrible weaknesses in the home and community."

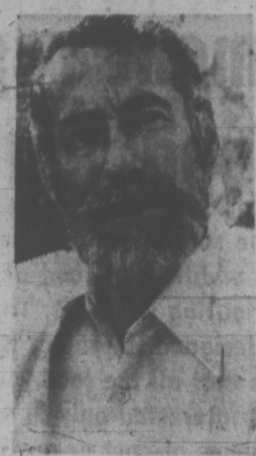

Private schools, he said, are "more likely" to be able to deal with problems that stem from that weakness because they also become the home and community of the boys and the school does not have a political responsibility to parents.

"I'd hate to be in the position of a principal—here I'm virtually autonomous," Wilkinson said.

The headmaster said he was "delighted" public schools are starting to offer alternative schools.

If they're successful, that's great," he said. "My aim is not to build up independent schools but I believe public schools have not provided the alternative needed by a significant number of boys."

"But I've heard about these kinds of experiments for generations—why do they fail?" Wilkinson thinks the separation of boys and girls is also an advantageous alternative.

WILKINSON

Boys, he contends, face girls in school who constantly do better than them academically and force them to feel inferior. This feeling of intellectual inferiority persists, he says, and can be harmful.

"This may be my own prejudice," he says, "but also I think if we had girls in school we'd lose some of our zip."

Independent schools pride themselves on their extra sports and recreational activities and Wilkinson feels if the school was co-ed boys would want to be together with the girls and would therefore be drawn to the "more gentle, more highly skilled" activities rather than the more exciting ones.

Wilkinson is a former student of Shawnigan Lake School.

After spending 21 years with the UBC commerce faculty he became headmaster just last year and says he has introduced several "heresies" to the school such as, trail bikes and water skiing.

Other activities offered for students at the school (all but 12 are boarders) include rowing, canoeing, sailing, diving, camping, squash, riflery, flying, riding and skiing.

Facilities at the school are far beyond what public schools can offer. With only average or better students accepted, academic standards and achievements are high and teachers are there around the clock to help the boys.

For some children and some parents it's an attractive alternative—if you can afford it.

Sitka Spruce Protected

The province has established five new ecological reserves in various areas of the province, including a 24,300-acre parcel containing some Sitka spruce trees measuring 10 feet in diameter.

The new reserves bring to 48 the number maintained in the province.

One reserve is 300 acres covering Jeffrey, East Cooper and Rankine Islands off the east coast of the Queen Charlotte Islands and contains a major habitat for marine birds.

The 24,300-acre reserve surrounds Port Canal on Graham Island and protects a number of falcon rookeries along with the Sitka spruce trees.

The southerly portion of Bowen Island is the site of a 980-acre reserve. A natural bog habitat of 640 acres near Fort Nelson and a sub-alpine area of 5,900 acres at the headwaters of the Skikani Chief River are located in the northeast sector of the province.

Resources Minister Bob Williams said the creation of the five new reserves "is in keeping with a continuing program to ensure that adequate samples representing the biogeoclimatic zones of the province are preserved for scientific and educational research."

Public Invited To E. Sooke Park Opening

The public is invited to the official opening of East Sooke Park at the Aylard Farm entrance on Becher Bay Road at 3 p.m. Thursday.

The park consists of 3,573 acres, including 2,173 acres of private land acquired by the Capital Regional District and 1,400 acres owned by the provincial government.

It is the largest of eight parks administered by the board and will be maintained in a semi-wilderness state.

NEW SCHOOL, CONVERSION APPROVED

LAKE-COWICHAN—Lake Cowichan School Board has approved construction of a new intermediate grade school and conversion of Stanley Gordon Intermediate school into an annex of the high school.

The conversion to a high school annex would take care of an anticipated increase in high school enrolment in the district over the next five years.

The new intermediate school will be a community school, designed for more than just school use, and the board plans to consult the community on its planning.

Government regulations protect the food you buy in Canada

Every once in a while someone comes out in print or on a 'hot line' program and makes a 'statement' about additives in food or the 'shocking contents' of certain products without really investigating the facts. The fact is, that our Canadian Government Food and Drug Laws are designed to protect us all and the policing of those laws is very good. Which simply means that all the food you buy has to be approved and/or inspected by government officials interested only in whether it meets their rigid standards, not in a manufacturer's problems of cost or anything else. The next time you hear a 'rumour' or a supposed 'statement' about a food product, take the time to find out the facts. It's amazing how often these 'statements' are actually quite misleading.

Dairy production in high gear

Throughout this coming month be sure to plan lots of meals around dairy foods. Generally speaking, June is a month when dairy products become more plentiful and represent good food value.

Easy Liver Skillet - For Variety in Meats

Turn to variety meats for mealtime variations. These will give a needed change of pace to your regular menu planning. Cooked with care and style, variety meats, such as liver, kidney and heart, can create meals your family will enjoy, like this Easy Liver Skillet.

1 lb. baby beef liver
¼ cup all-purpose flour
1 medium sized onion, thinly sliced
1 (19. oz.) can tomatoes
1 tsp. sugar
¼ cup butter
1 tsp. salt
1 tsp. Worcestershire sauce

¼ tsp. basil
¼ tsp. pepper
1½ cups (¾ lb.) shredded Canadian Cheddar
Cheese

Cut liver into ½ inch strips and coat lightly with flour. Melt butter in frying pan; add liver and brown quickly on both sides. Add onion and fry gently until almost tender. Stir in tomatoes, sugar, salt, Worcestershire sauce, basil and pepper. Cover and simmer gently about 15 minutes. Add cheese and stir until melted. If served in a casserole, garnish with additional shredded cheese and broil until golden. Makes 4 to 5 servings.

Tea Time Behind Tweed Curtain

The remainder of Greater Victoria will be welcomed behind the Tweed Curtain this weekend when Oak Bay stages its annual fun event — the Oak Bay Tea Party.

Along with the usual tea and crumpets, there'll be other food delights for the crowds who usually cross the border for the two event-packed days.

Maintaining its territorial rights, in spite of the welcome it extends, the municipality will have sentry boxes at key checkpoints, manned by bobbies to see that valid border passes are carried. The bobbies, however, have instructions to maintain a polite attitude at all times.

The fun starts at 9 a.m., Saturday, with a parade starting at Windsor Park.

Leaving at 10 a.m., the parade will go along Oak Bay Avenue, Foul Bay and Cadboro Bay roads, ending at Willows Beach.

Mr. and Mrs. Tweedle (usually known as Mr. and Mrs. Harry Wellburn) will ride on the Oak Bay Board of Trade float. The Official Butler will help quench their thirst with tea.

Bands, decorated bicycles, and undoubtedly a Union Jack or two will add color.

The official tea-pouring opening ceremony, takes place

1 p.m. at Willows Park. Various dignitaries will be on hand to check that it's done with the correct crook of the little finger. The Scarlet Band from Oak Bay Junior Secondary School will provide tea-time music.

A variety show will then be opened by master of ceremonies Fred Usher. It will include the Katherine Costain Dancers, the Zingari Puppets with Punch and Judy, the Flying Y Gym Team, and sports for children 11 and under.

Rock bands will have the "bedroom municipality" swinging in the evening.

Aerial flypasts, Roger Foley's Skydivers and the Victoria Radio Modellers with radio-controlled aircraft will all add zest to Sunday's program.

At least 14 entries, several from up-island, will take part in the annual bathtub race, each skipper bent on winning the Tea Cup Trophy.

Spy Plan Bared

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — A secret White House plan to spy on domestic radicals, rejected once at the insistence of former FBI director J. Edgar Hoover, later was put into practice, say sources close to the Watergate investigation.

In New York, The Daily News said today the plan included a proposal to break into the Canadian embassy in Washington "to determine what aid, if any, the Canadian government was providing to American draft resisters."

However, the newspaper said, the plan was never carried out.

In Ottawa, an external affairs spokesman said he had no knowledge of such a break-in plan. He said external affairs officials would examine the report before deciding what action to take, if any.

Two Washington sources, one of whom said he had seen the over-all spying plan, described it as providing for an undercover team made up of representatives of various federal agencies who had access to "virtually all agencies of government."

They said the secret agents intercepted mail, tapped telephones, audited income-tax returns and planted informers.

The top-secret text of the plan was looked in a safe-deposit box by ousted White House counsel John Dean and later turned over to a federal judge.

Asked about the domestic-intelligence plan, deputy press secretary Gerald Warren would not go beyond a statement in which Nixon last week discussed the Watergate scandal.

In that statement, Nixon said he had withdrawn a plan to spy on radicals in July 1970 after Hoover objected to it.

An intelligence evaluation committee was established the following December "to improve co-ordination among the intelligence community and to prepare evaluations and estimates of domestic intelligence," Nixon said.

The sources said they couldn't confirm whether or how long the group performed that function. But it soon became "a cover for a secret policy operation," the sources said.

The sources said the agents gathered information about the Black Panthers, anti-war priests Daniel and Philip Berigan and radical student groups.

"We know they were opening mail and harassing people," one source said. In discussing this committee Nixon said last week, "If it went beyond its charter and did engage in any illegal activities, it was totally without my knowledge or authority."

The Ellsberg break-in was the subject of former deputy CIA director Robert Cushman's testimony Tuesday before a county grand jury in Los Angeles.

Cushman, now commandant of the Marine Corps, told reporters he doesn't blame former White House aide John Ehrlichman for involving the CIA in the Ellsberg break-in.

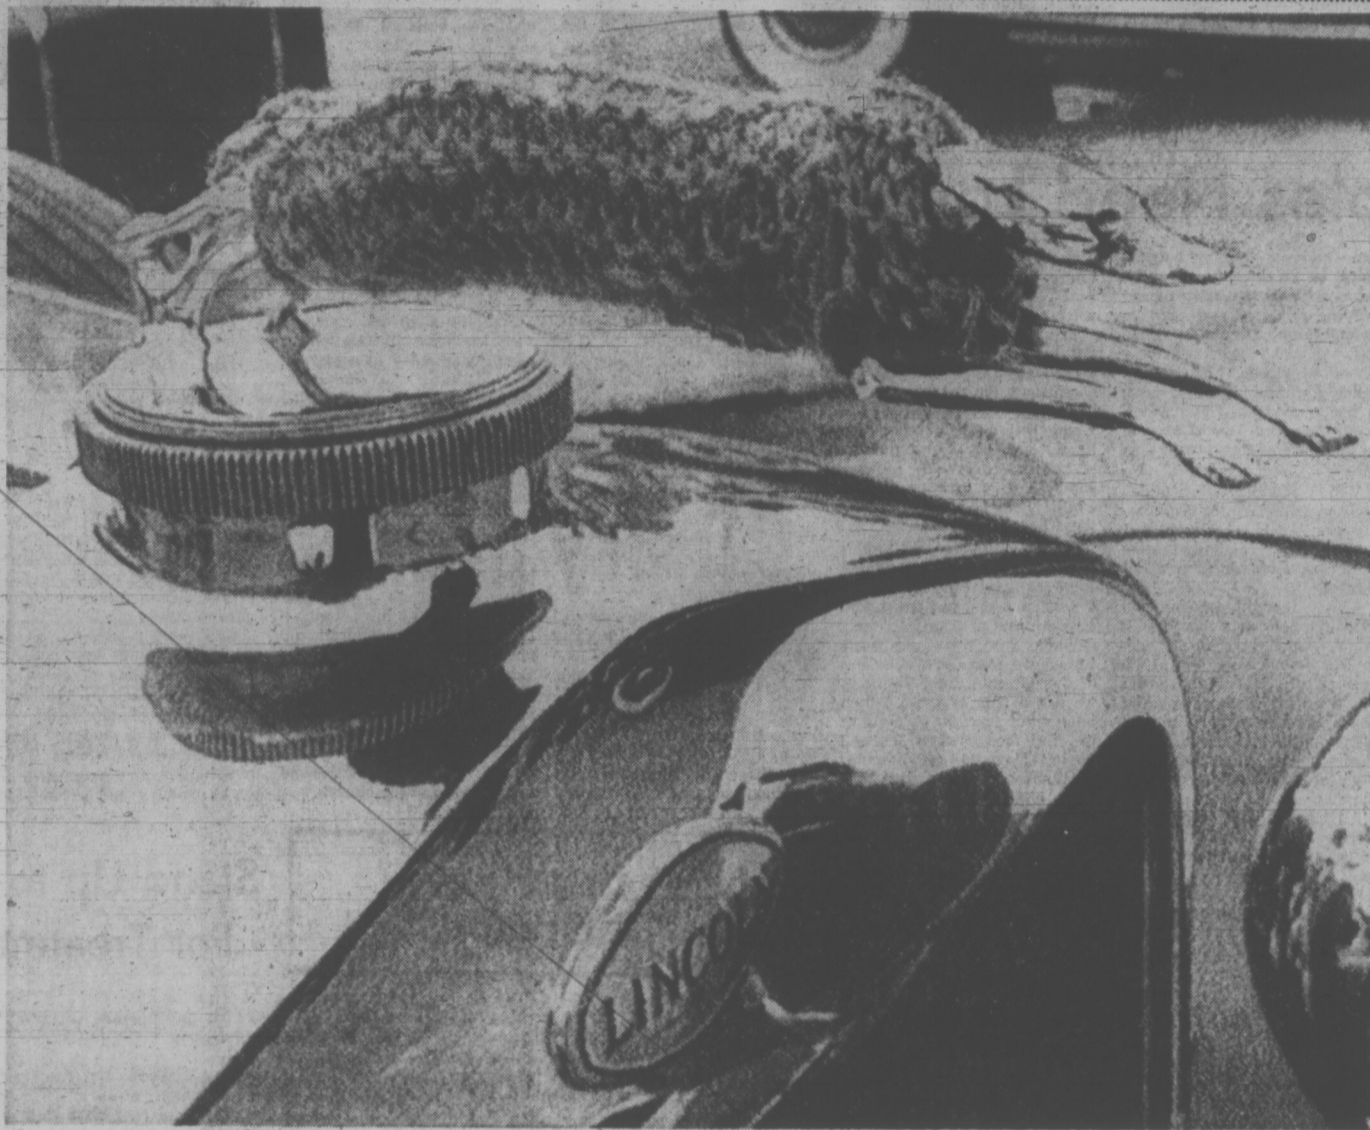

"I don't know whether he knew what Mr. Hunt (convicted Watergate conspirator E. Howard Hunt) was doing or not."

"I certainly think I was put upon... by Mr. Hunt," Cushman said. "When Mr. Hunt came to call, he said the White House had sent him," Cushman said.

Cushman said he would have provided no help if the name of Ellsberg had been mentioned in his discussions with Hunt or Ehrlichman.

In other developments, the Washington Post reported today that Frederick La Rue, a campaign aide to former attorney-general John Mitchell, has said he paid about $250,000 in cash to the Watergate conspirators for keeping quiet.

Quoting government sources, the newspaper said La Rue told the Watergate grand jury that he delivered about $200,000 in cash to E. Howard Hunt, $25,000 to the four Miami conspirators and $20,000 to $25,000 to Peter Maroulis, a lawyer for G. Gordon Liddy.

'Cooled' Spacemen to Watch for Bugs

HOUSTON (UPI) — Skylab's astronauts reported their space station was cooler today and scientists said weather was excellent for the pilots' first in-orbit survey of such things as insect infestation in Texas, gypsum beds in New Mexico and volcanos in Central America.

The initial use of the station's earth resources observation instruments was the major item on the astronauts' schedule today, NASA hopes the cameras and other sensors will lead to new ways man can deal with some of the more pressing problems on earth.

But before Charles "Pete" Conrad, Joseph Kerwin and Paul Weitz started the earth resources work, the pilots turned on Skylab's high powered solar telescopes for the second day and flashed back excellent television images of the sun and its atmosphere.

"We've got a beautiful picture down here," said communications William Hartfield. The relaxed crew of America's first space station also prepared to run more tests of man's ability to cope with the peculiarities of weightlessness and to scrutinize brilliant splashes on the sun that may erupt into solar storms.

The three astronauts were awakened at 7 a.m. as their orbital house crossed over Bermuda. They had slept in Skylab's private bedrooms for the first time.

"Things are cooling down," Conrad said. "It could be a little cooler but I think everybody got a reasonable night's sleep."

Kerwin reported one problem — sensors apparently failed in a skull cap he wore during the night. The instruments were to measure his brain wave activity and eye movement to help scientists determine how soundly man sleeps in weightlessness. Mission control said it received no data and Kerwin said the sensitive connections apparently dried out.

To keep the pilots constantly alert to the dangers of spaceflight, flight directors scheduled a fire drill for tonight. A warning fire alarm will be triggered and the astronauts will quickly trace its source and simulate either trying to extinguish the make-believe blaze or evacuating their big workshop area.

The main concern now of the astronauts is that their main, two-level living and work area is not cooling as fast as expected under the shade of an umbrella they raised Saturday. Officials now believe the temperature will level off around 80 degrees — 10 degrees warmer than hoped.

"It's not clear yet what effect that's going to have on our over-all operation," said flight director Neil Hutchinson before the crew went to bed Tuesday night. The cabin air temperature then was about 83 degrees.

Land-Use Laws 'Misunderstood'

Agriculture Minister Dave Stupich says his federal government counterpart must have been misinterpreted or must have misunderstood B.C.'s Land Commission Act when he criticized it last weekend in a speech in Vernon.

Federal Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan said Saturday the Land Commission Act infringes on civil liberties. "I can only believe that he has been misinterpreted or that he has misinterpreted the legislation because we have done nothing in that legislation that the government hasn't already done with respect to other land, for example land within municipal boundaries," Stupich said.

"There's nothing different. We're zoning," Whelan said in Vernon that Canadians are used to, and want, a free society.

What are some of the ingredients that go into the making of a long and happy marriage?

A measure of good health, the ability to give and take a lot in every day living and a determination, on both sides, never to get angry at one and the same time.

Mr. and Mrs. George Robinson, who will celebrate a diamond wedding anniversary next Monday, look at each other and smile when they offer those suggestions.

Behind that smile, of course, there are memories of good and bad times, of laughter and tears, shared throughout those 60 years.

Long before they met, their lives paralleled each other.

Both were born in Manitoba. Both their fathers had general stores and both families came to Victoria about the same time — down around the beginning of the 1900s.

George names his birthplace as the small town of Manitou where he remembers he once belonged to a Band of Hope, led by one of Canada's early authors and a fighter for women's rights — Nellie McClung.

His father visited Victoria briefly and liked it so well he returned to Manitou, sold his general store, loaded a railway car with surplus merchandise and brought his wife and family here.

He then opened a grocery and drygoods emporium in the Oddfellows Block on Douglas Street, later moving to Yates Street, between Douglas and Broad, where he continued in drygoods only.

Mrs. Robinson was born Ethel Louise Bailey, in Stonewall, Manitoba, 18 miles from Winnipeg. When her father sold his general store, he came here with his family to retire.

Both George and Ethel Louise joined the Metropolitan Church and entered into work with the Sunday school.

It was there they met, at a Sunday school picnic. "We've been going together ever since," George Robinson says.

They were married in the Metropolitan Church on June 4, 1913, by Rev. C. T. Scott.

Until then, Mrs. Robinson (or "Skip" as her husband always calls her) had been working in the office of the Canadian Puget Sound Lumber Company, where, she remembers, Archie MacKinnon was office boy.

Her salary was $65 a month, with no days off, not even a Saturday. "But we were a happy lot," she says, "and no one thought of complaining."

Robinson, who continued in the family drygoods business for a time after his father's death, had finally closed the store and was working for Pat Burns Wholesale House on Store Street, where he was earning $100 a month.

Later he worked for L. D. Rines, a pickle broker, in one of his stores on Menzies Street, and then in a grocery in Fairfield district.

In 1918, he became secretary-treasurer in the Plimley and Ritchie Bicycle store on View Street, "where I earned $125 a month." When he bought out Ritchie and became store manager, "it went up to $150."

At the end of nine years he resigned to buy the Harris and Smith business on Broad Street.

That was the beginning of a successful career in the bicycle business that sees him now the president of the family firm of Robinson's on Broad Street.

"When we were first married," he remembers, "every one rode bicycles. Then the auto came in and bicycles were used merely for telegraph and paper deliveries and by children going to school."

Came a day when juniors still rode bikes but the teenagers "wouldn't be caught dead behind the handle bars. It was the era of old cheap cars, as far as they were concerned."

Finally the 10-speeds appeared. "They captured the imagination, their popularity mushroomed and today it is again the 'in' thing to ride a bicycle."

Now the shop sells, sets-up and services these glamor bikes. Guns have also become a "big thing" in the store. Archery supplies, too, and the always popular fishing flies and tackle.

Today, George Robinson still goes down to the shop when he feels like it, but the business is run by the sons, Gordon and Doug.

Mr. and Mrs. Robinson have travelled a lot in recent years, in Canada and around the world. They have kept up their work in the church and until a few years ago, were active in the Sunday school.

Presently, they are joint presidents of the Golden Nuggets Club, a group of 30 couples in their senior citizen years, who have long-time membership in the church.

George and 'Skip' Robinson

Both have a hobby, shared and yet individually their own. Mrs. Robinson's is her snapshot albums that show pictures of the early years of their marriage, their sons and a daughter Helen (now Mrs. Henry Bird) in their youth, and the 10 grandchildren and six great-grandchildren that now round out the family circle.

Robinson's hobby, along with photography and gardening, is compiling scrapbooks. He started back in 1946 and he is now on his 45th book.

Each one is indexed and each contains clippings from newspapers and magazines of local, country and world-wide interest. "Anything of interest to me, goes in these books," is the way he puts it.

On Monday the couple has invited friends to join them for their 60th anniversary celebration at their Henderson Road home, where roses are in bloom in the garden.

Mrs. Robinson intends to wear her ivory-satin and lace wedding gown for the occasion. "Minus the train," she says, "it was cut off years ago."

She looks at her husband when she says that and again they smile. No doubt at a memory (precious now with so many others) shared long ago.

Even After Harvesting Vegetables Need Love

By HILDA BEASTALL

Take as much care with the handling of vegetables when you have gathered them fresh from the garden as you did in the raising of them. That is the only way to get full value from your efforts.

Guard the flavor, texture and color until serving time and the nutrients will be scarcely changed from the time of gathering. This same care applied to purchased vegetables particularly locally raised, which we may get the same day, will give us the best value for our money.

If young root vegetables el-ther home grown or bought, must be kept, put into covered containers (usually closed polythene bags) and chill in refrigerator vegetable bins. Do not wash until you are about to use. Then wash quickly with cold water, using a rough cloth to remove soil from the roots. Dry at once in a soft towel. Then prepare as necessary.

With young leafy vegetables freshly gathered for immediate use, wash quickly in cold water, dry thoroughly either in a soft cloth or in a salad basket.

Even though wilting, as may happen on a hot day if you're gathering a lot of vegetables, do not soak the green ones. Wash, dry as above and put them into a large covered basin or saucpan in a cool place until you need them. Perhaps on the basement floor or kitchen floor out of the sun.

All fruits and vegetables lose some of their nutritional value when exposed to strong light after gathering. This is well known with sweet corn on the cob, though not commonly thought about with green peas, pod beans, summer squash, tomatoes and bush fruits.

Sometimes we are obliged by circumstances to prepare our garden produce ahead of a mealtime. Gather, pull or pick as clean as possible, it saves preparation time later. Leaf lettuce can be just wrapped loosely in a damp towel before being put into a cool place, leaving the quick washing until before using.

Try all vegetables raw to get their true flavor. I don't know any that cannot be eaten raw. Grated young raw beet and white turnip, the young pods of peas when you have removed the thin outer membrane, diced or sliced summer squash, broccoli and cauliflower bud sections all these are delicious raw.

Use of stainless steel knives and graters, or well tinned grinders help prevent vitamin C loss in preparing fruits and vegetables.

When a cut surface turns brown we know there is loss of this vitamin. To prevent it, we use a film of fresh lemon juice or of vinegar (according to the food) when cutting apple, avocado or banana. Fortunately, yogurt has the same effect, and since this is another important food item, it can be used freely when making any kind of salad mixture.

In summary: keep fruits and vegetables away from strong light and heat; prevent loss of moisture by covering; wash quickly and as little as possible. Eat them raw when young. Grating and chopping to be done at last moment. Prevent discoloration.

Most of all, enjoy what you prepare, thus completing the cycle of the production of food.

Food Rules in Effect

OTTAWA (CP) — Federal regulations governing storage of barbecued, roasted or broiled meats and poultry are in effect now, but retailers have six months to comply with labelling regulations.

Dr. A. B. Morrison, assistant deputy health minister, says vendors will have until Nov. 11 to label meats and poultry with the information that they must be stored at temperatures below 40 degrees or above 140 degrees.

But facilities for such storage of meats and poultry must be met right away; Morrison said in an interview.

Storage below 40 degrees or above 140 degrees is necessary to prevent growth of food poisoning germs, he said.

First, follow your doctor's advice. Only a physician can prescribe a suitable medication for your malady.

The booklet also points out that it is illegal to advertise drugs claiming they can cure a number of serious disorders such as cancer, heart disease, rheumatoid arthritis, sexual impotence and venereal disease.

Furthermore, it is advised that you should never pass along medication that has been prescribed specifically for you. Another person with the same disease may require a very different drug.

Also note that non-prescription drugs, such as antacids, laxatives and cough remedies are meant only for short-term use. If an ailment does not clear up in a few days, see a doctor. Non-prescription pain relievers in particular should not be taken indefinitely without the approval of your doctor.

Medics, Clergy Form Guild to Air Stigma of Death

By CHRISTINE WALKER
LONDON (FWF) — "A few months after my son died, I visited my parents who lived about 200 miles away. I met lots of relatives and friends I hadn't seen since my little boy's death. Because of the distance, they hadn't been able to come to the funeral so this was their first chance of talking to me since that terrible happening. Well, they talked about everything but my bereavement. They didn't even refer to it. It was almost as if my son had never existed. Apart from his death, that was the most painful thing that ever happened to me."

This was a young mother talking about reaction to bereavement. Sadly enough, the reaction she met with is a common one. It is one of the paradoxes of modern living that the subject of death is taboo in conversation. The most personal subjects under the sun can be openly discussed, shouted from the rooftops, hurled at us from newspaper headlines, television and advertising — but not death.

We have come to regard the Victorians as a weird, narrow-minded lot. They had the most pompous, un-Christian-like attitude to poverty and, in some cases, treated the poor worse than we do criminals today. Their views on sex were so peculiar that we now regard them as a joke. It was a subject never aired or discussed. As far as the Victorians were concerned, it didn't really exist! Yet they were able to talk about death and the effect of bereavement on those left behind, quite openly, even amongst children. But in the so-called permissive 1970s this is one subject we ignore.

Psychiatrists, doctors, clergymen and other lay people have been looking into this odd phenomenon. The U.K. Guild of Pastoral Psychology has just organized a day conference on grief and mental conflict. A clergyman will talk about the psychological aspect of grief and mental conflict. A clergyman will talk about the Christian viewpoint with special reference to death.

family

The secretary of the guild, Mrs. Rita Cole, spoke to me about the purpose of the conference. "The business of bereavement and how to cope afterwards is a very deep problem," she said. "Most people are unaware of how they will be affected when a friend or a loved one dies.

They don't know in advance what their psychological reactions will be and when the time comes they just can't cope. Some people feel guilty while others go completely numb for months on end.

"Our guild try to discuss problems of our times and there's no doubt that this question of coping with death is one of them. Let's face it, at some time in our lives we are going to lose someone dear to us. Surely if we were better prepared for it, if the people around us knew how to help us cope, this would be a good thing."

Expanding on her theme, Mrs. Cole spoke of how bereavement had affected her personally. "I lost my little daughter some time ago," she said simply. "I know that people don't want to talk about death, so I kept my grief inside me. I mentioned it to hardly anyone. I thought that the English attitude of 'a stiff upper lip in times of stress' was the correct one. As a result, people got the impression that I didn't care. Neither my own way of dealing with it nor the attitude of other people helped me in the slightest. And that was at a time when a woman needs as much help as she can get."

"But you see, there's this awful business of not talking about it..." Because of her own tragic bereavement she is secretly dreading the conference but — "I know it will help people to a greater understanding of this problem."

Another member of the guild, the Reverend David Cox, meets and tries to help many bereaved people in his ministerial work. "Each individual is different," he explains. "They each have their own separate way of facing bereavement. I simply go along and do my best in every case."

Like Mrs. Cole, he agrees that the average person fights shy of discussing death and has no idea of how to help people who've been bereaved. "I think we have got into the habit of thinking of death as an unfortunate accident which science will cure," he says sadly. "This seems to be the attitude anyway. They refuse to accept it as part of life itself."

According to psychiatrists, the guilt factor is very strong when people are bereaved. Even if the person has died abroad they will spend time blaming themselves for the death. This and other aspects of grief are amongst the things which will be discussed at the Guild's conference.

50-Year-Old Indian Widow Given Post as Magistrate

NORWAY HOUSE, Man. (CP) — The chief of the Indian band in this remote community 285 miles north of Winnipeg is a bit of a trail-breaker.

Elected chief of the 1,600-member Norway House Indian band 20 months ago, Jean Folster takes up an additional challenge June 4.

That's when she'll hear her first case as a magistrate. Mrs. Folster, a 50-year-old widow with eight children, said in an interview Monday she feels her appointment is an important one for the Indian people.

She will be able to take guilty pleas in summary conviction cases, with the consent of the Crown attorney concerned, and assess penalties. In addition to hearing offences against laws governing highways, liquor, wildlife and snowmobiles, Mrs. Folster is qualified to take pleas of delinquency in family court.

Her predecessor as magistrate, Max Paupenick, a treaty Indian who lives at Norway House, has been named a court communicator — one who helps Indians to understand court procedures.

The northern circuit court to which Mrs. Folster has been named was inaugurated early last year to reduce the caseload of local magistrates.

As chief, Mrs. Folster has taken a tough line on liquor problems, blaming drinking for some of the troubles on the Norway House reserve and urging parents to set a better example.

"Children with good parents have respect for themselves and others when they grow up. They are our future leaders and chiefs."

Born in Norway House, a settlement in rugged swamp and rock country just north of Lake Winnipeg, Mrs. Folster has been active for years in her community.

She had to give up posts as band councillor and welfare administrator in Norway House when she was elected chief in a contest with three men candidates.

The position of chief, once largely ceremonial, has proven to be hard work, particularly the responsibility for welfare payments that go to 80 or 90 per cent of band members.

The lack of fur-bearing animals and poor markets have cut into the trapping and fishing that once helped bolster the never-prosperous local economy.

Mrs. Folster has been working for better recreation facilities for the reserve, to give youngsters something to do at night. Norway House has no TV.

As magistrate, a part-time post, Mrs. Folster's territory embraces God's Lake, Oxford House, Island Lake and Poplar River, in addition to Norway House.

She said she expects the problems she will face as magistrate will be different from the ones she's had to handle in her other duties to date.

The job of chief is a tough one, says Mrs. Folster, also vice-president of the Manitoba Indian Women's Association. "The pressure is so great. There are phone calls night and day."

Women Doing More

WASHINGTON (AP) — United States women in the 1970s are earning more, learning more, divorcing more and becoming pregnant less often than their predecessors says a new government brochure on women.

It also says divorced women wait a shorter time before remarrying and that more women, both young and old, live alone or with non-relatives.

The brochure, We the American Women, was prepared by the census bureau for use in high schools. It is described as an attempt to present 1970 census statistics in a form "readily absorbed" by students.

Its style is talkative and often in first person: "In America, from earliest times until the mid-20th century, we females were outnumbered by males."

It says women began to outnumber men during the 1940s and that there are now about 100 women for every 95 men.

It notes that young women are far more likely to be college students than their mothers; that income of working women has increased along with educational levels, and that only about five per cent of women age 44 had never married in 1970, compared with 11 per cent in 1920.

UIC Cost Rise Linked to Benefit Hike

OTTAWA (CP) — Higher benefit rates account for 60 per cent of a $150-million increase in unemployment insurance payments in the first quarter of 1973, Guy Cousineau, chairman of the Unemployment Insurance Commission (UIC), said Tuesday.

Cousineau told the Commons manpower committee that another 35 per cent of the increases in benefits paid out by the government so far this year are due to phasing in of new claimants under the program, while the remainder results from new maternity and sickness payments.

By the end of March, 1973, the benefit payments totalled $681 million, compared to about $530 million for the same period in 1972.

Last year, final cost of the program was about $2 billion, of which $122 million was administrative expense.

The total, almost double the figure the government had expected earlier in 1972, led to heavy Conservative attacks during the Oct. 30 election campaign.

Benefit payments this year vary between $32 and $107 a week. Last year, they ranged between $20 and $100 a week.

Cousineau said the 1973 January payments were about $100 million higher than those for January, 1972; February, 1973, costs were about $30 million more than for the same month in 1972 and March costs this year were $14 million higher than for March, 1972.

Meanwhile, Manpower Minister Robert Andras said an apparent contradiction in unemployment statistics results from improvements in his department.

Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield asked why unemployment insurance claimants in the first three months of this year were higher than in the first quarter of 1972 while Statistics Canada figures showed unemployment had been reduced.

Andras told the Commons his department had shortened its time for handling claims and there were "other factors," including the provision of maternity leave coverage.

Stanfield asked if the department is investigating the contradiction and was told there is constant examination of unemployment insurance trends.

Soft Drug Squad Disbands Because City Won't Pay

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Vancouver police soft-drugs squad will disband June 1, officials said Tuesday, because of a manpower shortage due in part to city council's reluctance to cover the cost of enforcement.

Council said the federal government should handle drug enforcement on a national basis, thus taking the cost load off municipalities.

Deputy Chief Tom Stokes, who praised the work of the eight-man squad, said the step to disband is being taken with reluctance.

The unit, when it was established last fall, was to determine the extent of soft-drug trafficking in the city. However, the squad moved into enforcement when it became evident the trade in hashish, marijuana, and other soft drugs was widespread.

The abolition of the soft-drug squad will leave 13 detectives to handle both the hard and soft drug trade.

$2.3M Catch

VANCOUVER (CP) — B.C. commercial fishermen landed a catch worth $2.3 million in April, an increase of 40 per cent over the same month last year, fisheries service statistics show. The increase is mainly because of higher prices for herring and salmon.

First Shipment

OCEAN FALLS (CP) — The first shipment of newsprint, 3,500 tons, from the restarted machines at the government-owned Ocean Falls plant will be loaded on June 6, plant manager Ted Vesak said Tuesday.

Mayor's Hike Held

PORT COQUITLAM (CP) — Aldermen here voted themselves a 20-per-cent raise hike to $3,600 from $3,000 a year but rescinded a raise for Mayor Bruce Scott that would have increased his salary to $9,000 from $7,500.

Studio Refused Permit

VANCOUVER (CP) — City Council upheld Tuesday a city staff recommendation denying a licence to Fiesta Dance Studio. The Better Business Bureau said several months ago that some dance studios were involving potential students in long-term contracts at high rates.

Mailbags Found

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — Employees at Capilano Timber Co. Ltd. found 36 bags of mail Tuesday in what they thought was an empty boxcar. The mail, sent from England, was found in a car sent here for loading after it had been repaired.

Principals Elected

SURREY (CP) — Teachers in seven Surrey schools will be working next year under new principals they themselves have chosen. The experiment involves four junior secondary and three elementary schools.

Ex-Chiefs to Run

KAMLOOPS (CP) — Gus Gottfriedson and George Leonard, two former chiefs of the Kamloops Indian band, were nominated Tuesday to run in a June 5 election to elect a new chief.

Rink Vote Set

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — Property owners in New Westminster will vote in September on a referendum on building a second ice rink in the city at an estimated cost of $600,000 to $800,000.

Delay Angers MLA

VANCOUVER (CP) — Ken Olson of Ladner was still in Oakalla correctional institute Tuesday, despite attempts by MLA Carl Liden (NDP-Delta) to have him transferred to Riverview mental hospital.

Liden said the situation was "unbelievable."

"He's sick, he needs help and in a couple of days he'll have been in there for three weeks," the MLA said.

"Some how or other we can't get this thing going through the bureaucracy. I'm sure annoyed — somebody needs to say something about this publicly."

Olson, a 25-year-old fisherman, has been in Oakalla since May 11, charged with wilful damage after a window-smashing episode at Surrey Memorial Hospital.

He was remanded to Oakalla for a psychiatric examination and a formal court request was made to have him transferred to Riverview.

Liden said he has been in touch with various departments, including the attorney-general and the health minister and an order-in-council permitting the transfer was signed by the lieutenant-governor last Friday. He said he was assured when the order was signed that the prison would be informed immediately.

"Olson is still in Oakalla and the warden says he has no orders to move him," Liden said Tuesday.

"We've gone through all the hoops. Maybe the system just needs to be overhauled. Even when you go through the system you can't get it to work — that's what annoys me."

Insurance 'Abuse' Blamed For Forest Labor Shortage

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Truck Loggers' Association says a manpower shortage in the forest industry is slowing production and damaging the British Columbia economy.

"This situation will worsen unless unemployment insurance abuses are stopped," warned the Vancouver-based association, which represents about 100 independent logging operations in B.C.

Statements attacking administration of the federal Unemployment Insurance Commission in B.C. were issued Tuesday by association vice-president Ian Mahood and director Jack McKercher.

"There has to be a return to what the UIC was intended to be — and insurance policy to benefit people who are out of work through no fault of their own," Mahood said.

"It was never intended to provide a guaranteed annual income for people who choose not to work, or a supplementary income to seasonal workers, like commercial fishermen, who earn way above the national average."

Mahood said the association realized that all the blame for the current labor shortage in the forest industry and the high turnover of workers, could not be placed on the UIC's doorstep.

Island Mill Complies With Order

VANCOUVER (CP) — Rayonier Canada Ltd. has reduced production of chemical cellulose pulp at its Port Alice mill to comply with an order from the provincial Pollution Control Branch.

A company spokesman said Tuesday the mill cut back production May 3 in amounts varying from 13 to 19 per cent. Normal daily production of the pulp, the basic ingredient in the manufacture of rayon and acetate yarns, is 460 tons.

The company said the action was taken to ensure the dissolved oxygen content of the water at the entrance to Narrows Inlet remained above the 60 per cent level stipulated in the order accompanying the permit.

Rayonier said 500 employees of the mill have not been affected by the cutback. The Port Alice mill supports a community of about 1,500 persons.

POLICE CARS RECALLED AS FIRE HAZARDS

DETROIT (UPI) — Ford Motor Co. Tuesday said it has begun recalling 1,230 Ford and Mercury police intercept cars which may have improperly fitted fuel hoses that could cause underhood fires. There have been no reports of fires in the 1973 model cars, Ford said, but the risk is there and the fuel line will be repaired by dealers. The problem was discovered by a production line quality audit. The front fuel hose on the specially built police cars may be improperly routed, causing it to rub against engine oil-cooler hose assembly fittings. Continued rubbing might cause a rupture and a fuel leak, Ford said.

China Opens Door to Buying on Credit

Handicraft practised on commune

By CARL MOLLINS
PEKING (CP).—China is moving quietly but swiftly into a program of imported industrial development that reverses long-standing policies of economic self-reliance and debt-free trade.

The program of importing on credit entire factory systems from non-Communist countries may tend to dictate the pattern of China's foreign relations and internal politics for years to come.

Within a few months, Chinese authorities completed a series of deals to purchase complete factory systems to produce such materials as synthetic textiles, chemical fertilizers, highly refined fuels and petroleum feedstocks. The purchases, mainly from Japan, include unprecedented payment arrangements, with credit terms of five years.

Hitherto, especially since the Chinese felt weakened by depending on imported Russian technology in the 1950s, Peking's policy stressed do-it-yourself industrial development and cash terms in trade.

To help feed the new petrochemical plants, Chinese authorities are also engaged in talks about importing equipment and technology to speed development of petroleum resources, notably in the northeast and offshore near Tientsin in the Po Hai Gulf.

ORDERS EXPECTED

Canadian petroleum industry interest, who completed a two-week, high-level visit to China earlier this month, expect orders for oil extraction and transport equipment.

Western observers, watching China's dramatic shift in economic policy, see import implications for politics as well as commerce.

The program is clearly an effort to make a quick leap in expansion of home production and eventually reduce dependence on imported foods and the necessity of cloth rationing.

When petrochemical plants are fully operational five or six years from now, synthetic textiles will be available both to augment and perhaps replace natural sources and imports. Simultaneously some cotton lands will be freed for food production.

At the same time, fertilizer

China's accelerated economic drive may have profound impact on her foreign relations. Self-sufficiency is giving way to buying on the cuff. And that means a bigger Chinese market for Canadian and other exporters.

output from the new plants should reduce reliance on imports and improve productivity on farms.

In another direction, the new plants will produce fuels for an expanding air-transport system and for a greater use of farm machinery.

FRIENDSHIP PROMOTED

The cost of plant purchases already negotiated and others expected soon has prompted Chinese commercial authorities to relax the past policy of paying cash on the barrelhead for imports. Western authorities would not be surprised if repayment, plans stretching beyond five years are arranged in future purchases.

The venture into longer-term credit arrangements will tend to reinforce China's recent drive on the diplomatic front to develop smooth relations with foreign governments of all ideological persuasions.

Just as important, it suggests that China will be intent on maintaining a placid political atmosphere at home. That means avoiding economically disruptive developments such as the 1966-69 cultural revolution, which stalled productive advance in the interests of purging Chinese society of Western-style individualism and purifying political ethics and work styles.

The need for political stability, induced by new industrial policies, comes during a decade when changes in political leadership are expected and at a time when authorities may feel inclined to relax formal rationing and other supply restrictions on certain foods, clothing and other consumer goods.

In the next few years current or new leaders will be required to test to the utmost the historical Chinese tradition of balance and compromise. They will have to mesh the demands of economic development with sometimes conflicting social pressures while trying to maintain the impetus towards Maoist communism.

At the centre of the problem is China's new commercial relations with the outside world. Outside observers estimate China will need to pay out at least $200 million a year for the next several years to finance its purchases abroad.

Deals since the beginning of this year include two ethylene petrochemical plants from the Japanese valued at more than $80 million; three fertilizer plants worth about $34 million from Kellogg Continental of the Netherlands, a subsidiary of M. W. Kellogg Corp. of Houston, Tex.; a $27-million synthetic textiles plant and a $41-million chemical fertilizer plant from Japan.

Also believed by Canton trade fair sources to be virtually complete, after negotiations with U.S. and Japanese interests are deals for ammonia plants worth perhaps $300 million.

Negotiations are understood to be in various stages for other such petrochemical plants.

The Chinese are expected to develop improved marketing techniques, packaging and delivery in order to raise exports.

So far, the Japanese have had the inside track on development sales to China. But some authorities expect more diversification of import sources on the ground that China wants to avoid undue dependence and debt with one country.

The Chinese harbor bitter memories of their lopsided reliance in the 1950s on imported Soviet technology which was withdrawn peremptorily around 1960 in the midst of a political dispute.

Masks are still common on the streets of China, where wearers believe the surgical mask prevents the spread of their head colds. However, also a common sight in China is spitting in the streets, in trains and even in restaurants.

Divers watch scaler gauge their haul

It's Aqualoggers to the Rescue

KAMLOOPS (CP) — In the Monte Lake country 25 miles east of here, the loggers are wearing schnorkels these days instead of hardhats.

With the price of lumber skyrocketing, a five-man crew has launched a unique underwater log salvage operation, yanking an estimated $70,000 worth of logs from the murky silt bottom of Monte Lake.

The operation, by Princo Salvage of nearby Westwood, recovered 18,000 board feet during the first eight days of work under contract to Crown Zellerbach Canada Ltd., which has a sawmill on the lake.

Although some of the logs have been lying on the lake bottom for more than 25 years, nearly all of them are in good enough condition to produce commercial grades of lumber and pulp chips. The remainder is being used for hog fuel.

About two million board feet of logs are estimated to be in the area of the 44-year-old saw and planer mill, which Crown Zellerbach bought in 1970 from the Ponderosa Pine Lumber Co.

The divers who are going down to put the choker lines on the submerged logs are equipped with schnorkels, wetsuits and flippers — not exactly standard equipment for loggers in the B.C. interior.

They say that they spend as much time finding the logs by touch as they do by sight.

"The visibility down there isn't much more than two feet," said Randy Kashino of Kamloops, one of two divers in the Princo crew. "The chokers push easily through the silt under the logs, but as soon as we stir the silt up, the visibility is zero."

"We have to work by feel."

The second diver, Kim Kraushare, also of Kamloops, said the only other technical problem of any consequence they encounter is in untangling the 10-foot wire chokers after they are dropped on the bottom from a tender boat.

The divers average six hours a day in the water, attaching the lines to big logs, which are dragged ashore for salvage by heavy-duty diesel tractors. Paid on the basis of the number of logs recovered, the two divers have been averaging about $90 a day each.

The three-mile-long lake is 175 feet deep at the centre, but most of the good logs are within depths of 80 feet. Monte Lake is a trout fisherman's paradise, and the provincial fisheries branch, which has approved the underwater salvage operation, regularly restocks it.

Crown Zellerbach says the lake bottom cleanup is part of the company's preparations for permanent closure of the mill in September, when the 80 men working at Monte Lake will be relocated in new sawmills at Armstrong and Kelowna in the B.C. interior. "This is only good house-keeping," said Crown's district logging superintendent, Jack Hansen. "A year ago, we made a voluntary commitment to the local communities and the provincial government to return the area as much as possible to its natural state."

Hansen added that his company expects to break even on the summer salvage work, perhaps make a small profit.

Val Pringle, owner of Princo Salvage, agreed but added the logs in deeper water will be more expensive to Jasso with the choker lines and haul ashore for cutting.

"The whole thing is highly experimental. It's going fairly well now, but we're still in relatively shallow water."

Pringle said that if the Monte Lake experiment works out, his company is going to take a look at a number of other lakes in the B.C. interior that were used to float log booms to market or mills in years gone by.

Federal Aid Urged For Rural Museum

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government should consider providing money to establish museums in rural areas and to help them buy artifacts of local interest, the Commons' committee on assistance to the arts said Tuesday in a unanimous motion.

The committee asked the government to discuss the idea of a separate fund for small museums with other levels of government, so as to avoid stepping on provincial or municipal toes.

Perrin Beatty (C-Wellington-Grey-Dufferin-Waterloo), sponsor of the motion, told Secretary of State Hugh Faulkner that he was "straining the credibility of the committee" to suggest that the federal government is responsible for national museums and not small ones.

Paul Yewchuk (C-Athabasca) argued that federal financing "would not negate the contributions of the provinces, municipalities, and private organizations."

People in small towns and rural areas should have an opportunity to enjoy museums and have the right to the same federal support as that given to national museums in major centres, Yewchuk said.

'JUMP' KILLS MOB WITNESS

NEW YORK (AP) — A 19-year-old girl, scheduled to be a state witness in two kidnappings, died Monday of injuries suffered in an apparently suicidal plunge from a rooftop.

The girl, Ann Marie Paixao, had been indicted in the allegedly mob-connected kidnappings.

She plunged from the roof of a six-storey apartment building Sunday night.

Bill to Increase Judges

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons gave final reading Tuesday to a bill that will raise the number of judges in a series of courts across the country.

Designed to ease the court work load, the bill was approved with one minor amendment. The change will add seven new judges in Ontario district and county courts, which now have 97 judges. Only four additional judges were proposed when the legislation was introduced.

If approved by the Senate and given royal assent, the legislation also will raise the five from three the number of judges on the federal Court of Appeal and to nine from seven the total on the federal court trial division.

It also provides for additional judges at the county or supreme court level in Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, Quebec, British Columbia and Alberta.

Canada Losing Charter Battle Of the Airways

OTTAWA (CP) — Air charter statistics show growing domination by foreign air carriers of the transatlantic market between Canada and Europe, says Donald Wallace, an Ontario government economist.

Mr. Wallace told the Canadian transport commission Monday that the foreign share of transatlantic flights grew to 56 per cent in 1972 from 48 per cent in 1970.

He was speaking during hearing of an application by Ontario Worldair Ltd. of Hamilton for an international charter licence. The application is supported by the Ontario government.

Worldair Canada Ltd., one of several air carriers opposing the licence request, told the commission it is seeking an injunction from the Federal Court to stop commission proceedings temporarily.

REFUSED REQUEST
Lawyers for Worldair asked last Thursday that the commission postpone the hearing until after the Federal Court hears the appeal June 14, but the commission refused.

Also opposing the Ontario Worldair application are Air Canada, Nordair Ltd., CP Air, Transair and Quebecair.

Mr. Wallace said that passengers leaving Canadian centres account for about two-thirds of the transatlantic traffic. Yet Canadian airlines carried less than 50 per cent of the Canada-Europe traffic.

This means the economy lost about $20 million in 1972 because foreign airlines are eating into the traffic originating in Canada, he said. Ontario's share of this lost revenue amounts to about $16.4 million.

Considering the impact on the economy of this lost revenue, Mr. Wallace said it means 720 fewer jobs in Ontario and 1000 less in all Canada.

USED FIGURES

Air Canada used similar figures in its application to buy a one-third interest in Worldair last December to argue that there was a need for a more aggressive Canadian effort to halt this trend to growing foreign domination of the transatlantic market. The Air Canada application was approved.

CP Air argued at that hearing that many foreign governments would not allow Canadian carriers to take more than 50 per cent of the traffic between their countries.

There have been recent changes in charter rules which prevent foreign carriers from charging lower prices than the lowest Canadian price for traffic originating in Canada.

U.S. air charter carriers also are no longer permitted to pick up passengers in Canada bound for a third country.

U.S. Looks for Allies In Libya Passport War

WASHINGTON — The United States has contacted Western European nations and the Soviet Union in an effort to force Libya to back down on its demand that all persons entering the country, including accredited diplomats, have passports written in Arabic, U.S. officials report.

The passport issue has become a major bone of contention between the United States and Libya and has already led to the expulsion of one U.S. diplomat and a Libyan refusal to admit another.

It is one of a number of issues that has led recently to a sharp deterioration in relations between the two countries at a time when Libya is threatening to cut off oil exports to the west if U.S. companies do not yield immediately to its demands for "full control" of their local operations.

Diplomatic relations between the two governments are tense. This is a result not only of the passport issue but also of flights by Sixth Fleet aircraft carrier planes within a Libyan-claimed 100-mile "restricted air zone" off its Mediterranean coast.

"We've made it very clear that we don't accept their 100-mile zone claim," said one State Department official.

The two countries have rejected each other's official protest notes over several Middle East incidents in the past few weeks.

While the State Department has considered breaking diplomatic ties with the oil-rich North African state, it has concluded that no useful purpose would be served by such major confrontation between Libya and U.S. oil companies is looming.

There are more than 30 western companies, most of them American, with at least $1 billion total investment in Libya, which currently produces 2.3 million barrels of oil daily. While most of Libya's oil goes to Western Europe, the U.S. market now is getting about 200,000 barrels daily. Libya's low-sulphur and therefore low-pollutant oil is in great demand now in the United States.

"It's a critical situation right now," said one U.S. official referring to Libya's threat to cut off the flow of oil if American companies do not yield to Libyan nationalization demands. "Who knows what they are going to do?"

Beirut Truce Weathers Test

BEIRUT (WP.) — The two-week-old truce that halted fighting between the Lebanese army and Palestinian guerrillas was reported Monday to have weathered its first important test when guerrilla leaders arranged for the release this weekend of three Lebanese soldiers kidnapped by Palestinians.

The Palestinian leadership moved quickly to head off a new explosion by publicly condemning the kidnapping. A similar incident on May 2, touched off a week of intermittent heavy fighting here in which more than 300 persons are thought to have died.

The terms of the truce remain secret. But enough information has filtered out in recent days to lead qualified analysts to conclude that while no binding agreement was reached, the Palestinians did make some concessions in the negotiations that ended the fighting.

But the guerrillas are steadfastly refusing to comply with key Lebanese demands to evacuate populated areas in Lebanon and to allow the Lebanese to establish police posts inside the large refugee camps, according to sources close to the Palestinian movement and diplomats.

Lebanese President Suleiman Frangieh, who is attempting to cope with new internal dissensions following the fighting and with an economic blockade imposed by Syria in support of the Palestinians, does not appear strong enough now to push for a showdown on these demands.

The Palestinians demonstrated their anxiety over a breakdown in the truce by ordering guerrillas of the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine (PFLP) to release three Lebanese soldiers kidnapped near Sidon Sunday.

Both sides now appear to be playing for time by setting up a new joint supreme co-ordinating committee which will supervise Palestinian-Lebanese relations. The key subcommittee of this group will work on the still-unresolved problem of the future status of Lebanon's refugee camps, where 185,000 refugees live.

According to sources in touch with the guerrilla leadership, the Palestinians have agreed to prohibit anti-aircraft guns, large mortars of a specified but undisclosed calibre and guerrilla training in the camps.

But they will not agree to Lebanese patrols in the camp to check on these provisions. The guerrilla presence, estimated to total more than 5,000 men, will not be affected in the Golan Heights and Arqoub areas.

Lama Builds New Hermitage In Lonely Himalayan Hamlet

By RAM SURESH
RUMTAKE, Sikkim (Reuter)
Lama Gyalwa Karmapa, the head of the famous Buddhist Red Hat sect of Tibet, now lives in this tiny village tucked away at more than 5,000 feet in the Himalayas.

Here, not far from his native Tibet now ruled by the Chinese, the 50-year-old lama has built himself a monastery and a home at an altitude of 5,400 feet — the same height as the palace of the chogyal (ruler) of the tiny Himalayan kingdom of Sikkim.

The Rumtake monastery officials proudly say that the elevation is symbolic of the status accorded to their head by the Buddhist ruler of Sikkim whose ancestors themselves came from Tibet.

The only dignitary in Sikkim who lives at a higher altitude is the Indian political officer. The former British rulers of India, conscious of their supremacy, constructed their residency higher than the palace. The residency now is India House.

The karmapa, as the lama is known, and his followers say that the new monastery is a far cry from their sprawling Churphu monastery in southern Tibet. But they are happy and resigned to the idea that they may never be able to go back to their original home.

The Red Sect lamas fled to India in 1959, along with the Dalai Lama, the temporal and spiritual leader of all Tibet. The karmapa decided to move to Sikkim at the invitation of the chogyal.

The Sikkim ruler ordered part of the hill, facing his capital of Gangtok, to be flattened for the new monastery and with a 300,000-rupee (about $40,000) grant from the Indian government work on the building began in 1964. It took 1,400,000 rupees ($195,000) and three years to complete and was consecrated in 1967.

Money also came from Bhutan, whose ruler is another follower of the karmapa, who pays annual visits to Bhutan. The Rumtake monastery was designed by the karmapa himself and is fashioned after the Churphu monastery.

Sitting in his sparsely furnished quarters, the head lama says that thanks to the governments of Sikkim, Bhutan and India, he has found peace in this corner of the world.

ARCTIC AIR POLICY

OTTAWA (CP) — The government plans an Arctic regional air policy, Transport Minister Jean Marchand announced Tuesday. He said the government will expand a current study of northern air-transport facilities to include such matters as safety, licensing and training requirements.

A regional policy is necessary because of increased air activity due to oil and gas exploration in the Arctic, Marchand said.

The air policy review will be undertaken by the Arctic transportation agency, an arm of the transport department. The agency will seek views of operators and users of northern air transport.

B.C. Fuel Crisis Predicted If Controls Too Binding

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia division manager of Gulf Oil Canada Ltd. says overly restrictive controls on the petroleum industry in this province could eventually lead to an energy shortage.

E. E. Walker said existing oil refineries here have almost reached their collective capacity and that new installations will be necessary to meet future gasoline demand in B.C.

Walker, a director of the B.C. Petroleum Association, was referring to the New Democratic Party government's controversial Energy Act, proclaimed this month, which provides for an energy commission to regulate and control B.C.'s energy resources.

The commission, under the chairmanship of James Rhodes, has the power to control and even roll back fuel oil prices in B.C.

"At this time, there is no energy crisis in B.C.," he said. "But the demand for petroleum products is increasing each year and the industry's refinery capacity is almost fully utilized."

"As long as there is an attractive investment climate in B.C., it would seem safe to assume that the province's refining capacity will be expanded to keep pace with that growing demand."

"However, if industry controls become too restrictive and, as a result, investment does not occur, then the demand for products will eventually exceed the supply and a shortage will result."

Phillips Fell...Twice

Times News Service

LONDON — It was only after he had fallen from his horse that a royal wedding became a reality.

This was revealed Tuesday when Princess Anne, sporting a sapphire and diamond engagement ring and a happy grin stepped off the royal train here.

The Queen's 22-year-old daughter and Lieut. Mark Phillips, 24, had been engaged since Easter but after all the earlier speculation, and firm denials by the couple, even close friends were taken by surprise when the official announcement — finally came from Buckingham Palace.

A palace spokesman said that at the time of the denials "they really had no thought of getting married."

"It was only decided over the weekend after the Badminton horse trials."

On that occasion, equestrian star Phillips, an Olympic gold medalist, who has been in keen rivalry with champion horsewoman Anne, got a soaking when his horse threw him at a water-jump and had to retire from the field.

The wedding is expected to be in mid-November, either at Westminster Abbey or St. George's Chapel, Windsor.

Emerging from the royal train today in green tweed country clothes, Phillips looked a trifle apprehensive at the glare of television cameras and the publicity that lies ahead of him.

The engaged couple were to lunch later with both sets of parents at Buckingham Palace. Phillips then is due to rejoin his regiment, the Queen's Dragoon Guards, in West Germany.

The regiment is on standby later this year for posting to Northern Ireland, but it is understood Phillips will not go with them. Early next year he will be posted to Sandhurst military academy as an instructor with the acting rank of captain.

It is expected he will be urged to accept an earldom, as did Anthony Armstrong-Jones, who married Princess Margaret. Angus Ogilvy, the businessman husband of Princess Alexandra, declined a title but the husband's of sovereign's daughters usually are expected ed to take a hereditary peerage.

The Phillips family is moderately wealthy and Mark, though a commoner like Armstrong-Jones and Ogilvy, has several aristocrats among his relatives. His aunt is a sister of the Duke of Norfolk, the Earl Marshall of England, that at the time of the denials and he also is related through his mother's banking family, the Tiarks line, to the Duke of Bedford.

TOTS GIVEN MARIJUANA

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — Police have accused a young couple of giving marijuana to their two children, one aged 14 months and the other a four-year-old.

A police spokesman said the marijuana was given whenever the children cried.

He said an undercover agent trying to make a purchase from the couple saw the four-year-old smoke two marijuana cigarettes and the infant smoke marijuana three times.

Lynn Albert Kuhnack, 23, and his wife, Janet Cheryl, 22, are charged with conspiracy to sell marijuana, and with possession with intent to distribute it.

MORE EX-POWs MAY BE CHARGED

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Several more ex-POWs—some of them officers—may be charged with collaborating with their North Vietnamese captors, Pentagon sources said today. Charges already have been levelled at eight enlisted men.

Col. Theodore W. Guy, 44, a former POW from Tucson, Ariz., Tuesday charged five soldiers and three marines with military violations ranging from seeking political asylum in Hanoi to making model planes for the North Vietnamese to use in target practice. One was charged with assaulting another prisoner.

Pentagon sources said future charges, if made, could include officers up to the rank of lieutenant-colonel.

At the end of the Korean war, only 565 or 13 per cent of the 4,428 POWs who returned were questioned and investigated. More than three-quarters were cleared without trial. Others were booted out of the service. Only about a dozen were tried and convicted by courts-martial.

High Crime Rate Around Hotels

KINGSTON, Ont. (CP)

Residential areas with licensed hotels and shopping plazas are likely to have higher crime rates than similar areas without these facilities, a criminologist told the annual conference of learned societies Tuesday.

Peter Engstad, a doctoral student in the University of Alberta's sociology department, said this conclusion was reached after a study he made of three city areas.

In one area with a licensed hotel, there were 440 crimes compared with 40 in a similar area without one.

The fact that the hotels sold liquor was not the major reason for the crime increase. Such facilities provided a chance for criminal activities simply because people gathered in them.

Rick Linden, a sociologist from the University of Manitoba, told the conference that a study he has done showed that the commonly-held assumption that juvenile delinquents come from working-class families is largely false.

His study was based on school records, police records and questionnaires filled out by 1,588 boys.

CLASS MEANINGLESS

"There is little... which would support the notion that middle-class boys are less delinquent or that patterns of delinquency vary by social class," he said.

The conference was told by two sociologists from the University of Windsor that men appear to be happier in their marriages as time goes by, while women appear to grow dissatisfied.

Robert Whitehurst and Mary Alice Beyer said that early in marriage men seem to have a negative attitude while their wives have a positive approach. When they reach middle age they switch sides.

Their conclusions were based on the study of 100 married couples.

Prof. Whitehurst said there seems to be some support for the theory that men get the best deal out of marriage compared with their wives.

YOUR HEALTH: Dr. Walter Alvarez

A New Way of 'Pulling' Teeth

Dr. Everett Mumaw, a Cleveland dentist, has spent 10 years perfecting an apparatus which, when clamped over a tooth, causes the tooth to vibrate some 500 times a second. This causes the membranes surrounding the tooth to be so loosened that the tooth can be easily pulled out of the socket without causing much pain.

The apparatus will not be on the market for a while, but it certainly sounds like a most interesting one.

Most people find insect bites annoying but not serious; however, there are a few persons who show severe allergic reactions to insect bites. Recently, Dr. Claude A. Frazier, of Asheville, N.C., reported that he was able to protect some 60 persons who suffered severe allergic reactions from insect bites, half of them bites of mosquitoes, by treating them with injections of small amounts of the biting insects themselves.

The insects involved in the study were mosquitoes, black flies, kissing bugs, deer flies, fleas, and horse flies. The study did not include the stinging insects, such as the bee, wasp, hornet and yellow jacket, the bites of which are well known to cause severe allergic reactions and even death in some specially sensitive persons.

Reactions of the overly-sensitive persons to the biting insects ranged from mild to severe, but none of the persons died; they had such symptoms as swelling of the joints, blood blisters, nausea, dizziness, cough, wheezing, runny nose, shock or feelings of great fatigue.

The people who were sensitive especially to mosquito bites showed highly favorable responses to the injections. Only three patients had no benefit from the injections, and one was worse afterward.

Fuchsias' Full Charm Developed With Care

Fuchsias by the thousand are sold each spring to home gardeners, many acquiring them for the first time. A few guidelines may help to develop the full charm of these delightful plants though they have been around in cultivation for 270 years.

As with other flowering plants with a historical background, hybridizers in Europe and the Americas have produced several hundreds of fuchsia varieties. Some are harder than others, and the habits vary from almost creeping to almost treelike.

Between these extremes are those sold in pots, hanging baskets or tubs. Liking a fair amount of sun in this latitude but not the scorching heat of afternoon, these are ideal plants for patio, north-facing apartment balconies and sun decks, as well as on hollow walls where their flowering growths are admired from all sides.

When bought in small containers early in the season, fuchsias are only beginning their growth. Unless they are sold as hardy species to be planted into open garden and left there over winter, the small plants must be gradually shifted into larger pots.

A direct shift to a six-inch pot will not be satisfactory. The process is to shift into one-inch large pots as the roots develop. The little plants may wither and die otherwise. Gradual shifting encourages faster rooting. During this period the soil should be damp all the way through the pot, but never wet.

At the same time, the tip of each growth should be nipped out before flower buds form to make side branches and a shapely plant with many blooms. Do this nipping three times. The plant flowers about five to six weeks after the last pinching date.

A good soil from the compost heap with a little coarse sand if it is of heavy texture; in general fuchsias will grow in any humusy, well drained soil.

Leafmould, well decayed cow or horse manure, rotted seaweed, all these things mixed with garden soil are suitable. Use the same components when planting into garden beds.

Once fuchsias are in flowering-size pots, or if already well established in hanging baskets, watering will be almost a daily need. Soak them well at each watering.

Fertilizer is best delayed until first flowers have opened or the plants will continue growing branches and not forming flower buds. When the pots or baskets are full of roots, weak solutions of liquid type fertilizers with a low analysis such as 1-1-1 are safe to give once each week. Use this as a copious watering in place of the plain watering for that one day of the week.

The ambitious gardener will want to train fuchsias to standards, pyramids or fans. For these purposes, the August cuttings must be kept growing all winter in a heated greenhouse (50 to 60 degs. F.), working on the plants a little at a time as they grow. Standards have been grown to a height of 10 feet; pyramids are handsome too, and a fine project for an interested amateur. Starting the first year with a two-foot specimen, imagine the impact of a five-footer in three years.

SOLUTIONS THURSDAY

By FRED KARPIN

Today's deal is a most simple one to play correctly. Yet, when it arose (in a novice game), our South declarer misplayed it. Neither side vulnerable. South deals.

 ♠ 8 6 2
 ♥ K 4
 ♦ 10 8 7 3

WEST
 ♠ Q J 10 4
 ♥ J 8 5 2
 ♦ J 4
 ♣ Q J 7

EAST
 ♠ 9 7 3
 ♥ Q 10 9
 ♦ Q 9 6 2

SOUTH
 ♠ A K 5
 ♥ A 7 6 3
 ♦ A K 5
 ♣ A K 9

The bidding:
 South West North East
 3 NT Pass Pass Pass

Opening lead: Queen of ♠.

After taking the opening spade lead with his ace, our South declarer perceived that he had eight top tricks, two in each suit. The ninth trick, if it were to be forthcoming, had to be made in either the diamond suit or the club suit: if the six outstanding diamonds were divided 3-3, then dummy's fourth diamond would become a winner; or, if on the other hand, the six missing clubs were divided 3-3, then the board's fourth club would become declarer's game-going trick.

Actually, of course, it was a pure guess as to whether the six outstanding diamonds or the six outstanding clubs were divided 3-3 (if either was). It seemed to South that diamonds was the proper suit to attack.

So, at trick two, he cashed the ace of diamonds, and this was followed by the diamond king, West dropping the jack. A third diamond lead was then made, in the hope that West possessed the queen. But West discarded a heart. East promptly cashed two diamond tricks, and returned a spade, South taking the trick with his king. When play had concluded, South had ended up with the same eight tricks with which he had started.

At first glance, it might appear that the combined diamond holding was stronger than the combined club holding — but it wasn't. South had the nine of clubs in combination with dummy's ten, whereas there was no nine-spot in the diamond suit in combination with the board's ten.

At tricks two and three, declarer should have cashed the ace and king of clubs. Had he done so, he would have caught West's jack (just as his king of diamonds had actually caught West's jack). It would now have been completely immaterial whether West still possessed the club queen, or whether East had that card. The nine of clubs would next be given away to the defenders' queen, and dummy's ten of clubs would become declarer's ninth, and game-going, trick.

FUN WITH FIGURES

By J. A. H. HUNTER

Peter put down his pen. "We were talking about 'gimmicks' for quick multiplication," he said. "Look at this." "Okay. You've got a 4-figure number, and you then put a 3 at the end and a 3 in front," Mike commented, glancing at the sheet of paper. "So what?" "That multiplies it by 43," replied Peter. "Isn't that something?"

What was the 4-digit number?
 Thanks for an idea to G. R. Cussen, New York.

Painting Lost

LONDON (AP) — A Renoir painting, Jeune Garcon, was reported missing Tuesday after it was flown here from the United States. The work, scheduled to be auctioned at Christie's here, is estimated to be worth about $250,000. Christie's reported the picture was flown in last Friday from Philadelphia. Its owner was not identified.

CITY BEEF JUMPS 10 CENTS

Victoria consumers were struck with a 10-cent-a-pound increase for all prime beef cuts this week.

One wholesaler predicts that beef prices could rise as much as 40 per cent in the next two months.

The price of poultry also is soaring.

Victoria housewives caught in the price squeeze can take comfort from what is being handed Vancouver consumers. There, the price of steak has jumped as much as 30 cents a pound in some cases.

Of Victoria meat outlets checked today, one had raised the price of porterhouse steak from $2.39 to $2.49 a pound, the price of ground beef from 92 to 95 cents a pound, and stewing beef from $1.23 to $1.29 a pound.

A check with a Vancouver outlet showed a rise from $2.49 to $2.79 for porterhouse steak, a rise from 89 cents to $1 for ground beef and a rise of 13 cents for stewing beef, now selling at $1.25.

Wholesaler Dennis Wheldon says the crux of the problem of soaring beef prices is that not enough cattle are being raised to meet the demand.

Wheldon and meat retailer Garry Williams agreed that switching from beef to pork could help keep family budgets in line.

Williams said centre-cut loin pork had dropped from $1.69 to $1.49 a pound.

Fuel Exports To U.S. Up 32%

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Canada's exports of energy materials to the United States during the first three months of the year were 32 per cent higher than in the same period last year, statistics Canada reported Tuesday.

Exports of energy materials to the United States totalled $395.1 million during the first quarter of 1973 and $321.4 million during the first quarter of 1972.

Statistics Canada attributed the increase to growing U.S. energy needs and reported it was led off by a 37 per cent increase in the value of crude oil shipments to the U.S.—an increase in value of $89 million.

The other major increase in exports of energy materials reported by Statistics Canada for the first quarter was a doubling in volume of coal exports to Japan from 1.5 million tons during the first quarter of 1972 to about three million tons during the first three months of the current year.

There was a significant drop in Canada's imports of crude oil, natural gas, other fuels and electricity from the U.S.

During 1971 and 1972, more than 90 per cent of Canada's exports of these materials went to the United States and 23 per cent of its imports came from the United States.

In the first quarter of 1972, the proportion of shipments to the U.S. rose to 92 per cent but the share of imports from countries other than the U.S. rose to 33 per cent.

In Toronto, spokesmen for major oil companies said the increase in exports to the U.S. to meet energy shortages would not cause any problems in Canada.

"The only gasoline we would consider exporting is surplus gasoline and we haven't had much of that lately anyway," an official of Imperial Oil Ltd. said.

A Shell Canada Ltd. spokesman said:

"We are committed to protecting the supply of motor gasolines, diesel fuels, and heating oils to its existing Canadian customers — whether branded retailers, commercial accounts, municipalities or re-sellers."

Energy Minister Donald MacDonald has told the Commons that if the petroleum industry "finds it impossible" to restrict exports of gasoline, the government will impose controls as it did earlier with crude oil exports.

The energy minister said the squeeze may be felt by independents who have relied in the past on cheap crude oil imports into Eastern Canada. Those supplies are no longer available.

In Washington, treasury officials are debating the merits of increasing the federal tax on gasoline by four cents a gallon and President Nixon is expected to make a decision soon.

An increase in the tax would discourage consumption as well as bolstering the government's coffers.

Taking the opposite tack, officials are keeping a running review of gasoline prices across Canada "in terms of how our fits in with the rest of the nation" before making a decision.

U.S. BOOM AT PEAK

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The U.S. government reported Tuesday that its index of leading economic indicators declined in April — a possible signal that the business boom of the last two and one-half years may have reached its peak.

The index tells what already has happened in 12 unrelated areas and gives a clue of what is likely to occur in the future. Since 1948 it has been very accurate in providing advance information.

Thus, if the current one-month decline persists — and if the index's record for accuracy continues — it probably means the business expansion that began in October of 1970 will peak out later this year.

Regret In Saigon

Times News Services

SAIGON — South Vietnam reacted with dismay today to the Canadian withdrawal from the International Commission for Control and Supervision (ICCS), but the Viet Cong said the arrangements fell through because the Canadians had distorted the Communist attitude "with ill intentions."

Canadian ambassador Michel Gauvin, who found he could not act because of the veto power exercised by Poland and Hungary over the four-power group that includes Indonesia, said Canada's decision to quit would impair the peace team's functions.

"Nobody is indispensable," Gauvin said. "And Canada is not indispensable. There is no reason why the Commission should not continue to function after the departure of Canada." He suggested that an Asian nation take Canada's place.

A spokesman for the Viet Cong's provisional revolutionary government (PRG) said, "... The Canadian delegation to the ICCS has on many occasions displayed a lack of objectivity and lack of selflessness and has distorted with ill intentions the serious and goodwill attitude of the PRG, and covered up the acts of violation committed by the U.S. and the Saigon administration."

Saigon government spokesman Bui Bao Tuer, however, said the Canadian withdrawal will "make the task of controlling the cease-fire more difficult."

"We have always dreaded the idea of the Canadians pulling out of Vietnam and we learned the decision with dismay," Truc said.

Six countries, meanwhile, were mentioned in Saigon diplomatic circles as the most likely to replace Canada — Mexico, France, Brazil, Japan, Malaysia and Ireland.

External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp announced in Ottawa Tuesday that Canada would pull out of the ICCS by July 31. The reason, he said, was the truce team's failure to supervise the Vietnam cease-fire.

In Washington, presidential adviser Henry Kissinger said the Nixon administration "regrets" but "can understand" Canada's decision to withdraw its 280-man peace-keeping force from Vietnam.

"We regret it especially at this time when we hope that out of the negotiations going on in Paris an agreement that can be implemented will emerge," said Kissinger.

The peace-keeping force, meanwhile, bogged down again today on an issue on which it has bogged down before, the interrogation of four Communist prisoners captured by South Vietnamese after the truce went into effect Jan. 28.

MUSICAL RIDE on the Victoria-Vancouver run occurred daily for a five-day trial period which ended Monday as B.C. Ferries' officials measured response as a prelude to possibly extending the plan for the summer. Victoria's George McDowall and The Lads supplied the music.

ANTI-NDP GROUP LAUNCHED IN B.C.

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Majority Movement for Freedom and Private Enterprise, (MMFPE) a new political movement aimed at forming a non-socialist coalition to defeat the NDP government, has been launched in British Columbia.

Every household in the province will receive a flyer outlining the objectives of the new organization.

Named as spokesmen on the front page of the four-page flyer are Earl A. B. Whist of Kamloops, campaign manager in the last federal election for Kamloops Liberal MP Len Marchand, and Arnold F. C. Hean, a Burnaby lawyer and businessman.

Whist said Tuesday the movement represents a union of his own Grassroots Society to Restore Free Enterprise Government in Victoria (GSREFGV) with the forces represented by Hean, who has for months been urging a right-wing coalition against the NDP.

Whist said the movement has a steering committee of 16 persons, but declined to identify them.

Super Depot Plan Confirmed

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

Municipal Affairs Minister James Lorimer today confirmed that his department is planning to construct a large transit depot close to the legislature.

"It will have to be quite a large development," he said. "However the project will not start right way, not this year," he said.

Lorimer said the transit depot would be a key feature in his department's plan to stress rapid transit for Victoria and Vancouver.

Downtown streets should primarily be for buses and possibly rail-type vehicles like streetcars or people-movers, Lorimer said.

He said the proposals were in an early stage of development and some preliminary discussions were being held with the City of Victoria.

Lorimer also confirmed his department is interested in purchasing any Vancouver Island bus lines that are for sale.

"Some private companies have told us they want to get out of the field," he said.

"However we are not anxious to take them over just for the purpose of making them government-owned. If they are providing a service we are content to have them continue to do so."

He said that in areas where private lines were not providing what the government considered to be an adequate service, B.C. Hydro or Pacific Stage Lines (owned by the government) would expand to provide the service.

In some cases this expansion might overlap with a private company providing partial service.

He said it would be premature to make any announcements about the stage of negotiations or discussions with the Vancouver Island bus firms.

On Tuesday London Omnibus Tours Ltd., which owns five double-decker buses, said any announcements on their negotiations would have to come from Lorimer.

The company, if purchased

Turner Woos Tories

OTTAWA (UPI) — Finance Minister John Turner Tuesday made a determined bid to gain Conservative support for his corporate tax cuts, offering members of Parliament the right to vote to withdraw the measures after a review of their effects next April.

Turner introduced the corporate tax reduction legislation in the House of Commons Tuesday and he combined it with the personal income tax cuts announced in his federal budget last February.

In his legislation, Turner included a provision which would permit 60 MPs, one-quarter of the house, to move a motion after April 1, 1974 to have the whole issue of corporate tax cuts redrafted.

If the House of Commons decided by a majority vote that the measures should be withdrawn or restricted, the government would have to draw up new legislation, the finance minister said.

He said the proposal was "a precedent dictated by a unique situation where the government has only two more members than the opposition. I think it is a reasonable, sensible compromise."

Turner added he wanted the legislation debated and through the house before the summer recess, scheduled for the end of June. He said the government would have Parliament sit past that date, if necessary to get the legislation through.

Turner's proposal appeared to gain Conservative support, but New Democratic Party leader, provoked the roars party would not support any cuts for corporations.

Real Caouette, Social Credit leader, provoked the roars of laughter when he accused Prime Minister Trudeau of

Fish Deal Bought A Year—Davis

By IAIN HUNTER
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Fisheries Minister Jack Davis said Tuesday that the 11-month reciprocal fishing agreement signed with the U.S. Friday means that both countries have "bought a year in which to sort out our differences."

Although the Pacific Trollers Association has criticized the agreement, Davis said that the alternative would have been far worse.

"It would have been much worse if the Americans had pushed us out of their waters and we had pushed them out of ours, forcing both of us to fish within our own lines," he said in an interview.

He described the present situation as "free trade with the United States on fish," and added that while the Americans were trying to tear up the existing reciprocal arrangement, Canada succeeded in retaining it for another year.

Pacific Trollers Association president Joe Garcia had said that under the new agreement, which runs from June 15 of this year to April 24, 1974, Canadian trollers would suffer a net loss of $310,000 a year, compared to the net loss to U.S. trollers of $48,000 a year.

But Davis stated that while Canadian boats no longer will be able to fish off about half the Washington State coast, U.S. fishermen have been pushed off the Vancouver Island West Coast.

The minister said halibut fishermen around Prince Rupert should be happy "that we obtained this respite."

MPs Approve New Moose Ban

OTTAWA (CP) — In a tense vote Tuesday night the Commons gave second reading, approval in principle, to legislation that would extend the partial ban on the death penalty for another five years.

The 138-to-114 vote, wider than many expected, left opponents of the death penalty jubilant and prompted Solicitor-General Warren Allmand to announce that the government may ask Parliament to abolish the death penalty.

"There's a point of view that if we did something to tighten up parole the House would be ready to consider complete abolition," he said after the vote was taken.

"I'm not saying we are definitely going to do it because we haven't made any decision."

The legislation, restricting the death penalty to murderers of on-duty policemen and prison guards, would renew an initial five-year ban that expired Dec. 29.

The bill now goes to the Commons justice and legal affairs committee where several members have announced they will attempt to have it amended.

Marcel Prud'homme (L — Montreal St. Denis) and Jim Fleming (L — York West) say they will seek abolition with a 25-year minimum sentence for all first-degree murderers.

Others say they will press for abolition under the current parole regulations, which allow convicted murderers to apply for release after 10 years.

The noisy vote, taken with galleries packed, followed 11 days of debate spread over more than four months. It was a free vote without the normal political restraints of party allegiance and led to a split in all parties by Social Credit.

Eighty-four Liberals, 25 Conservatives, and 29 New Democrats voted for the bill, including Vancouver Island NDP members Tommy Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands) and Tom Barnett (Comox-Alberni); 21 Liberals, 77 Conservatives, one new Democrat, 14 Socials and Roch La Salle (Ind. — Joliette) voted against, including Victoria's two PC members, Allan McKinnon and Donald Munro.

Eleven MPs, excluding

Speaker Lucien Lamoureux who did not vote, were absent or did not rise when the vote was taken. They were four Liberals, five Conservatives, one New Democrat and one Social Credit.

Prominent members voting in favor included Prime Minister Trudeau and his full cabinet except absent Science Minister Jeanne Sauve, Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield, NDP Leader David Lewis and former prime minister John Diefenbaker. Social Credit Leader Real Caouette was the only party chief to vote against the bill.

The 'Old Man' of 55: Our Craziest Waste

Mr. Bobby Riggs, the tennis player and gentleman burglar, is said to be on his way to making a small fortune from the simple proposition that a clean old man with enough cunning can conquer any woman champion on any court any time.

Having proven his theory with the crushing 6-2, 6-1 defeat of Margaret Court, Mr. Riggs is now beaver-busy whipping up interest for more of the same, including a challenge from Billie Jean King, a process that should earn him the undying hatred of every man or woman on the far side of a 50th birthday.

Mr. Riggs is 55. He, himself, is responsible for the description "old man." Indeed he has gone even farther, asking that he be accepted into a women's tournament because, as he put it, "After all, sex for most men ends at 55..." That there's been no public outcry at this idiotic remark is attributable entirely to the fact that it reflects with only too much fidelity our North American culture. Men or women, beyond 50 are considered old, are considered to be nearing the end of their sexual life.

It is the one fact of life on this continent that continually amazes and confounds the Europeans who come here to visit or live. They find that men or women who are middle-aged, by European standards, who are at the peak or their powers mentally and still in possession of their physical vitality are considered to be over the hill.

As for those who have reached the retirement age of 65 there's a kind of banishment that represents a scandalous waste of humans.

Tony Jones, writing in the current Harper's, notes, "Thus quarantined, their experience invalidated, the old have become 'senior citizens', burdensome anachronisms sequestered in nursing homes, retirement villages, and spare bedrooms. As we are lately discovering, however, their numbers are so great and the isolation so effective that the old represent a subculture in their own right."

Mr. Riggs is "old" at 55. But Picasso was experimenting with new ideas in his 90s. Titian was nearly 100, still painting, when the plague took him. Bertrand Russell's last book came out when he was 91. Verdi composed Falstaff at 80. Santayana published Dominations and Powers when he was 87. Ho Chi Minh was successfully running a beleaguered nation at 79, an age now being approached by Mao Tse-tung. Churchill kept on until he was 80 and De Gaulle until he was 79. Charles Chaplin, looking ahead to his 85th birthday, is busy putting together a new film.

A Canadian reporter, on assignment, say, in Amsterdam or Zurich or Bonn or Florence, finds that his interviews with the leaders in business, labor, the arts or government are with men whose average age is at least 60, whose eminence is established by an acceptance that wisdom, sagacity and the art of decision-making come only with age and experience. Just the opposite is true in our North American culture.

The problem is compounded on this continent by the fact that more people are living longer every day, that the average life-span is in a constant process of expansion. Thus the numbers of people rejected by society or considered to be an unproductive part of it become more significant every day. The longer they live, it seems, the more they are considered a burden.

Curiously enough, the North American concern with age is not to harness it for the good of the community, but simply to stretch it as far as it will go. Longevity is an obsession. What to do with the extra years is hardly considered.

In its current examination of this phenomenon Harper's offers us reports on the incredible ages reached by inhabitants of sheltered, tranquil communities in the Greater Himalayas, the Caucasus and the Andes where hundredth birthdays are common and a surprising number of men and women live a quarter of a century beyond that mark.

These articles document patterns of diet and exercise, but the common denominator is a respect for the aged. The greater the years, the greater the prestige. "It is rewarding and possibly life-extending," writes one authority in the Abkhazians, "to be needed and respected at 90 or even 110."

That surely is the element that's lacking in North America where the fear of age, the fear of being dispensable, of being patronized or without respect or purpose, accelerates the aging process and makes an "old man" of a 55-year-old.

'Days' Profits Stand at $16,000

The non-profit Victorian Days society stands to profit by more than $16,000 from last week's three money-making ventures.

The biggest single profit is expected from the Penny Farthing Inn, a two-night beer-drinking operation in the city-owned Memorial Arena.

Finance committee chairman David Baird thought final figures would show a profit of $3,000 to $9,000. The figure would be about three times the profit Baird says was planned by the organizing committee.

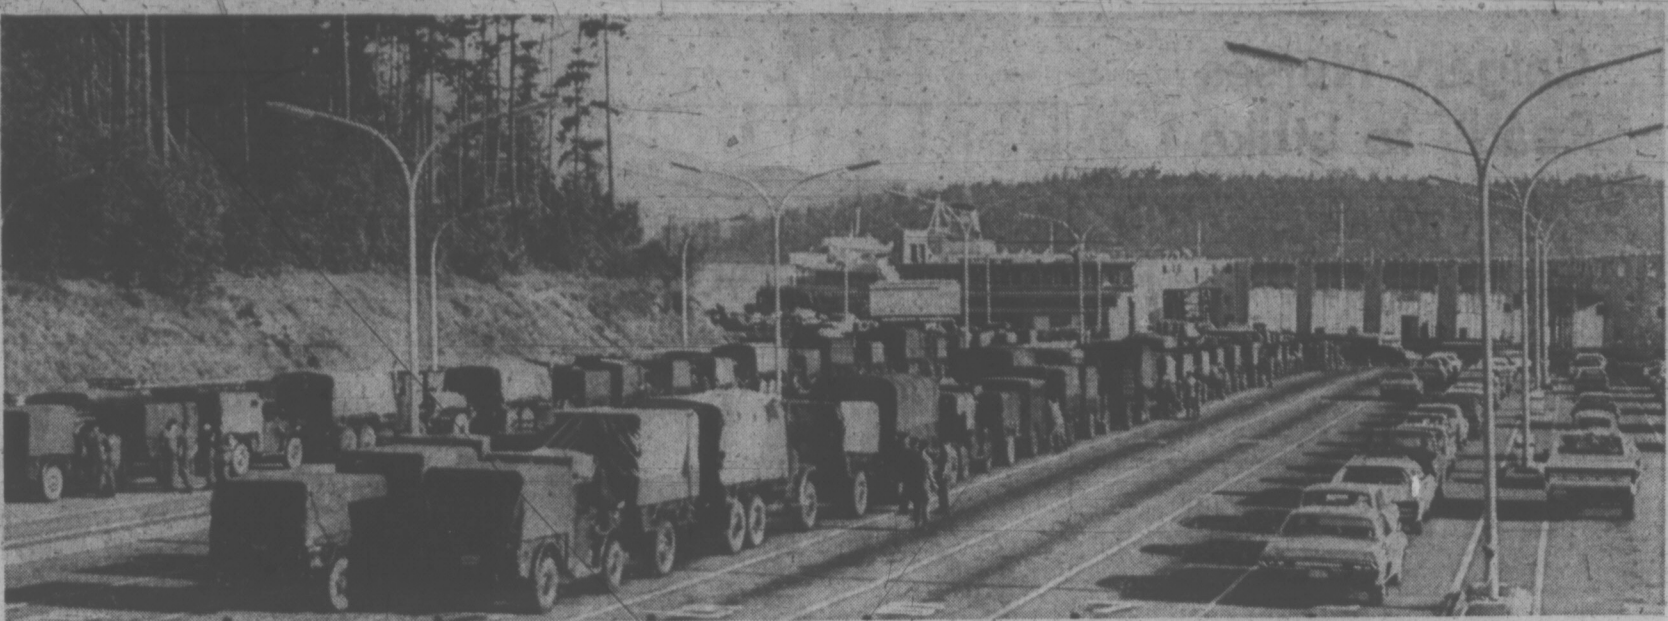

Only 2,000 were expected at the Inn, Baird claimed in an interview today, although he admitted that 3,000 beer mugs were purchased.

An entrance charge of $2.50 per person, which included one of the mugs until they ran out early on the second night, gave the entrant the privilege of sitting at a trestle table drinking bottled beer at 50 cents each.

Entertainment was provided free to the organizers by the Rothmans cigarette company.

Citing an approximate attendance of 5,500 persons Baird said gross income from the Inn operation "would not be too far off" $20,000.

He said he could not name an approximate figure for outlay on arena rental, insurance, staffing at union rates and drink supplies, but he

Messages From God Cost $100

A 23-year-old man, who interrupted his trial Tuesday to spout messages from God was fined $100 for contempt of court today in provincial court.

Allan D. Laatsch, 316 Menzies, was charged with assaulting a police officer March 22.

He said in court Tuesday he had just one thing to say — that Const. Doug Potentier "was the son of the devil... and the enemy of all that is good."

The outburst came after Provincial Court Judge F. S. Green asked Laatsch if he wanted to cross-examine Potentier.

Potentier had testified Laatsch had hit him in the mouth, kicked him in the leg, and tried to gouge out his eyes.

Court took two intermissions to allow Laatsch to think over the incident and decided if he wanted to apologize.

But after each recess, he refused, saying "I've been told by God to say it and I've said it."

The trial continued today.

Repairs Set On Caisson Gate

Yarrows Ltd. has been awarded a $63,946 contract to repair the caisson gate at the Esquimalt Graving Dock, federal Public Works Minister J. E. Dube has announced.

The hardwood on the gate, one of two which shut off the drydock, is deteriorating and will be replaced with Australian gum wood, a Yarrows spokesman said today.

Critical Lack of Nurses May Force Bed Closures

By DON VIPOND
Times Staff

A shortage of registered nurses this summer could force both of Victoria's general hospitals to "shut down" beds, spokesmen said today.

Royal Jubilee and Victoria General Hospitals now anticipate being short 72 nurses by the end of June.

A scarcity of registered nurses through the summer is an annual occurrence as many quit to take holidays, travel or be with their children when school is out. But the shortage this summer is shaping up as more severe.

Administrations from both hospitals will meet in two weeks to plan co-ordinated action.

In past years, Victoria General has had to shut down whole wards for lack of nursing staff. If Jubilee has to shut down beds this summer, it will be for the first time.

Can't Spread Staff Too Thin

Jim Fair, executive director at Victoria General, said 20 to 40 beds may have to be taken out of circulation.

The alternative is spreading staff so thin the level of nursing care is threatened, he said.

The hospital will be short 36 registered nurses by July. About 250 RNs are employed at Victoria General.

At Jubilee, executive director A. C. Pickles said the hospital hopes to avoid closing down beds but "it may become inevitable."

Nursing director Elizabeth Moore said Jubilee is short 23 registered nurses now and a projection indicates the hospital will also be short 36 by the end of June. There are about 400 RNs employed at Jubilee.

The problem is compounded by the shortage including some specialty areas, she said, such as operating room and psychiatric nurses.

Pickles said that the meeting between the two hospitals on the problem is being held so that "whatever we do, we'll be complementing each other."

'Think Big' on Fees

Saanich should "think big" when it sets fees for re-zoning applications, Mayor Hugh Curtis said today.

At present there is no charge for staff work involved in the process of changing zoning for proposed developments.

Tuesday night, council's planning committee recommended a fee schedule—nominal for individuals seeking single lot zone changes and rising substantially for apartment and large commercial developers.

There is no reason householders should subsidize commercial applications, particularly when the value of a subdivider's land was being raised substantially in the process.

Curtis suggests something in the range of $100 to $150 for apartment developers.

ADVICE ON THOSE MURALS ... JUST TRY THEM OUT

A two to three month trial period for the controversial murals in George Road Hospital would be a "reasonable compromise," Colin Graham, director of the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria, said today.

"Try them out for a few months," advised Graham.

"Then, if the elderly people still don't like them, that's a different case."

The hospital has threatened to obliterate one or more of four murals painted by artist Luis Merino in four dining rooms of its new extended-care unit.

Merino has been painting the semi-abstract murals, each covers an entire wall, since February, financed by a Local Initiatives Project grant.

The murals are now finished and Merino will turn them over to the hospital

GRAHAM
... a compromise

Thursday. He said today he will photograph them before he leaves.

Hospital administrator Bill Morrison said today there has been no final decision on the murals.

Complaints from hospital staff and relatives of patients prompted Morrison's earlier warning the murals may be obliterated.

"I think he's done a sincere and well thought out job," Graham said of Merino's work.

"I think the problem seems to be the majority of those who are seeing them are over 70," he said. The semi-abstract style "comes as a bit of a shock to them."

Graham said he knows other cases where initial reaction to an abstract painting was negative, but after a few months of exposure, the viewers grew to like it.

Command Change Set June 21

Rear-Admiral Reginald Pickford will take over command of maritime forces Pacific from Rear-Admiral R. H. Leir in a change of command ceremony 3 p.m. June 21 in CFB Esquimalt.

The ceremony will take place on the parade square of the Canadian Forces Warrant Officers School.

Leir will assume his new post in Ottawa as chief of maritime operations July 1.

Pickford has been serving as military attaché in Washington, D.C.

Let's Have It in Writing

"Rap sessions" with the public are too confusing and Saanich will revert to the written word in an attempt to discover what kind of neighborhood Cedar Hill Park area residents really want.

Council's planning committee will send out a questionnaire to all residents in the area surrounding the golf course — on both sides of the Saanich-Victoria boundary.

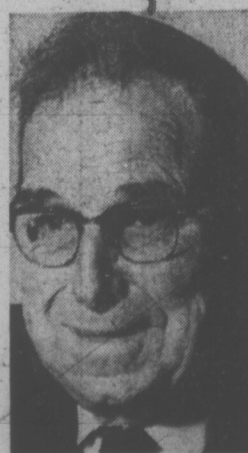

Aldermen said the views of Victoria residents should also be considered because they too are obviously involved.

Mayor Hugh Curtis said "Our experience with public meetings on planning is not sufficiently refined that we should try it again in this area."

He pointed to heated citizen meetings on Gordon Head development, and to a public hearing on apartment development in the east Cedar Hill area.

He felt personal interviews and question forms would fill the same purpose.

"But eye-ball-to-eye-ball discussion is where you get valid comments," said Ald.

... golfers favored

Edith Gunning, suggesting the planners put material on display at Cedar Hill Community Centre.

The debate prompted discussion on whether Cedar Hill Park provides public enjoyment or concentrates on golfers.

Ald. Leslie Passmore said he had heard criticism that council leaned toward the "golfing fraternity" and not enough toward public usage. He has been asked when a pedestrian walk around the course would be provided.

Ald. William Noel, chairman of Cedar Hill golf course management committee, said planners should take into account a proposed professional survey to consider realignment of the course.

He added: "Some people think golfers have two heads. This is not the case. Most golfers are normal people. We are maintaining open space for future generations and it's (the course) is paying for itself and subsidizing some of the other recreational activities."

WEATHER

Tonight: Clear, Cool
Thursday: Sunny, Warmer

89th YEAR, No. 296

Victoria Times

VICTORIA, B.C., WEDNESDAY, MAY 30, 1973

CITY BEEF JUMPS 10 CENTS

Victoria consumers were struck with a 10-cent-a-pound increase for all prime beef cuts this week.

One wholesaler predicts that beef prices could rise as much as 40 per cent in the next two months.

The price of poultry also is soaring. Victoria housewives caught in the price squeeze can take comfort from what is being handed Vancouver consumers. There, the price of steak has jumped as much as 30 cents a pound in some cases.

Of Victoria meat outlets checked today, one had raised the price of porterhouse steak from $2.39 to $2.49 a pound, the price of ground beef from 92 to 95 cents a pound, and stewing beef from $1.23 to $1.29 a pound.

A check with a Vancouver outlet showed a rise from $2.49 to $2.79 for porterhouse steak, a rise from 89 cents to $1 for ground beef and a rise of 13 cents for stewing beef, now selling at $1.25.

Wholesaler Dennis Wheldon says the crux of the problem of soaring beef prices is that not enough cattle are being raised to meet the demand.

Wheldon and meat retailer Garry Williams agreed that switching from beef to pork could help keep family budgets in line.

Williams said centre-cut loin pork had dropped from $1.69 to $1.49 a pound.

Fuel Exports To U.S. Up 32%

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Canada's exports of energy materials to the United States during the first three months of the year were 32 per cent higher than in the same period last year, statistics Canada reported Tuesday.

Exports of energy materials to the United States totalled $395.1 million during the first quarter of 1973 and $521.4 million during the first quarter of 1972.

Statistics Canada attributed the increase to growing U.S. energy needs and reported it was led off by a 37 per cent increase in the value of crude oil shipments to the U.S.—an increase in value of $89 million.

The other major increase in exports of energy materials reported by Statistics Canada for the first quarter was a doubling in volume of coal exports to Japan from 1.5 million tons during the first quarter of 1972 to about three million tons during the first three months of the current year.

There was a significant drop in Canada's imports of crude oil, natural gas, other fuels and electricity from the U.S.

During 1971 and 1972, more than 90 per cent of Canada's exports of these materials went to the United States and 23 per cent of its imports came from the United States.

In the first quarter of 1973, the proportion of shipments to the U.S. rose to 92 per cent but the share of imports from countries other than the U.S. rose to 93 per cent.

In Toronto, spokesmen for major oil companies said the increase in exports to the U.S. to meet energy shortages would not cause any problems in Canada.

"The only gasoline we would consider exporting is surplus gasoline and we haven't had much of that lately anyway," an official of Imperial Oil Ltd. said.

A Shell Canada Ltd. spokesman said:

"Shell is committed to protecting the supply of motor gasoline, diesel fuels and heating oils to its existing Canadian customers—whether branded retailers, commercial accounts, municipalities or re-sellers."

Energy Minister Donald MacDonald has told the Commons that if the petroleum industry "finds it impossible" to restrict exports of gasoline, the government will impose controls as it did earlier with crude oil exports.

The energy minister said the squeeze may be felt by independents who have relied in the past on cheap crude oil imports into Eastern Canada. Those supplies are no longer available.

U.S. BOOM AT PEAK

WASHINGTON (UPI)

The U.S. government reported Tuesday that its index of leading economic indicators declined in April—a possible signal that the business boom of the last two and one-half years may have reached its peak.

The index tells what already has happened in 12 unrelated areas and gives a clue of what is likely to occur in the future. Since 1948 it has been very accurate in providing advance information.

Thus, if the current one-month decline persists—and if the index's record for accuracy continues—it probably means the business expansion that began in October of 1970 will peak out later this year.

Regret In Saigon

Times News Services

SAIGON — South Vietnam reacted with dismay today to the Canadian withdrawal from the International Commission for Control and Supervision (ICCS), but the Viet Cong said the arrangements fell through because the Canadians had distorted the Communist attitude "with ill intentions."

Canadian ambassador Michel Gauvin, who found he could not act because of the veto power exercised by Poland and Hungary over the four-power group that includes Indonesia, said Canada's decision to quit would not impair the peace team's functions.

"Nobody is indispensable," Gauvin said. "And Canada is not indispensable. There is no reason why the Commission should not continue to function after the departure of Canada." He suggested that an Asian nation take Canada's place.

A spokesman for the Viet Cong's provisional revolutionary government (PRG) said, "...The Canadian delegation to the ICCS has on many occasions displayed a lack of objectivity and lack of selflessness and has distorted with ill intentions the serious and goodwill attitude of the PRG, and covered up the acts of violation committed by the U.S. and the Saigon administration."

Salmon government spokesman Bui Bao Tuer, however, said the Canadian withdrawal will "make the task of controlling the cease-fire more difficult."

"We have always dreaded the idea of the Canadians pulling out of Vietnam and we learned the decision with dismay," Truc said.

Six countries, meanwhile, were mentioned in Saigon diplomatic circles as the most likely to replace Canada—Mexico, France, Brazil, Japan, Malaysia and Ireland.

External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp announced in Ottawa Tuesday that Canada would pull out of the ICCS by July 31. The reason, he said, was the truce team's failure to supervise the Vietnam cease-fire.

In Washington, presidential adviser Henry Kissinger said the Nixon administration "regrets" but "can understand" Canada's decision to withdraw its 280-man peace-keeping force from Vietnam.

"We regret it especially at this time when we hope that out of the negotiations going on in Paris an agreement that can be implemented will emerge," said Kissinger.

The peace-keeping force, meanwhile, bogged down again today on an issue on which it has bogged down before, the interrogation of four Communist prisoners captured by South Vietnamese after the truce went into effect Jan. 28.

MUSICAL RIDE on the Victoria-Vancouver run occurred daily for a five-day trial period which ended Monday as B.C. Ferries' officials measured response as a prelude to possibly extending the plan for the summer. Victoria's George McDowall and The Lads supplied the music.

ANTI-NDP GROUP LAUNCHED IN B.C.

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Majority Movement for Freedom and Private Enterprise (MMFPE) a new political movement aimed at forming a non-socialist coalition to defeat the NDP government, has been launched in British Columbia.

Every household in the province will receive a flyer outlining the objectives of the new organization.

Named as spokesmen on the front page of the four-page flyer are Jarl A. B. Whist of Kamloops, campaign manager in the last federal election for Kamloops Liberal MP Len Marchand, and Arnold F. C. Hean, a Burnaby lawyer and businessman.

Whist said Tuesday the movement represents a union of his own Grassroots Society to Restore Free Enterprise Government in Victoria (GSREFGV) with the forces represented by Hean, who has for months been urging a right-wing coalition against the NDP.

Whist said the movement has a steering committee of 16 persons, but declined to identify them.

B.C. Gov't Bus Plan Confirmed

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

Municipal Affairs Minister James Lorimer today confirmed that his department is planning to construct a large transit depot close to the legislature.

"It will have to be quite a large development," he said. "However the project will not start right away, not this year," he said.

Lorimer said the transit depot would be a key feature in his department's plan to stress rapid transit for Victoria and Vancouver.

Downtown streets should primarily be for buses and possibly rail-type vehicles like streetcars or people-movers, Lorimer said.

He said the proposals were in an early stage of development and some preliminary discussions were being held with the City of Victoria.

Lorimer also confirmed his department is interested in purchasing any Vancouver Island bus lines that are for sale.

"Some private companies have told us they want to get out of the field," he said.

"However we are not anxious to take them over just for the purpose of making them government-owned. If they are providing a service we are content to have them continue to do so."

He said that in areas where private lines were not providing what the government considered to be an adequate service, B.C. Hydro or Pacific Stage Lines (owned by the government) would expand to provide the service.

In some cases this expansion might overlap with a private company providing partial service.

He said it would be premature to make any announcements about the stage of negotiations or discussions with the Vancouver Island bus firms.

On Tuesday London Omnibus Tours Ltd., which owns five double-decker buses, said any announcements on their negotiations would have to come from Lorimer.

The company, if purchased

NEWS BRIEFS

Indy Halted

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — An explosive collision in the fourth turn at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway strewed debris all over the track and a man was hit by an emergency truck in the pits, calling a halt to the Indy 500-mile auto race during the 59th lap today.

The crash in the turn involved at least two cars. They were obliterated by heavy smoke and chemical fumes.

Air Strike Voted

EDMONTON (CP) — Air Canada machinists voted 97 per cent in favor of strike action against the airline Tuesday, the fourth time in seven years.

Price Fixing

HALIFAX (CP) — Seventy-four Nova Scotia fire insurance companies were arraigned in city police court today on charges of conspiring to fix prices over a 10-year period.

Mutineers Freed

ROME (Reuters) — Capt. Nicholas Pappas and his crew of 30 mutineer Greek naval officers are free to start a new life here today after the Italian government granted them political asylum.

Six Break Jail

FORT SASKATCHEWAN, Alta. (CP) — Six men — two considered dangerous — escaped from the medium-security penitentiary here Tuesday night by cutting through cell bars on an outside wall and lowering themselves to the ground, a prison official reported.

Turner Woos Tories

OTTAWA (UPI) — Finance Minister John Turner Tuesday made a determined bid to gain Conservative support for his corporate tax cuts, offering members of Parliament the right to vote to withdraw the measures after a review of their effects next April.

Turner introduced the corporate tax reduction legislation in the House of Commons Tuesday and he combined it with the personal income tax cuts announced in his federal budget last February.

In his legislation, Turner included a provision which would permit 60 MPs, one-quarter of the house, to move a motion after April 1, 1974 to have the whole issue of corporate tax cuts debated.

If the House of Commons decided by a majority vote that the measures should be withdrawn or restricted, the government would have to draw up new legislation, the finance minister said.

He said the proposal was "a precedent dictated by a unique situation where the government has only two more members than the opposition, I think it is a reasonable, sensible compromise."

Turner added he wanted the legislation debated and through the house before the summer recess, scheduled for the end of June. He said the government would have Parliament sit past that date if necessary to get the legislation through.

Turner's proposal appeared to gain Conservative support, but New Democratic Party leader David Lewis said his party would not support any legislation which included tax cuts for corporations.

Real Caouette, Social Credit leader, provoked the roars of laughter when he accused Prime Minister Trudeau of

Dollar Off, Gold $113

Times News Services

LONDON — Gold leaped to a new record price of $113.25 an ounce in London today, and renewed doubts about the dollar sent it plunging on the European markets.

Gold dealers, however, said trading volume was light, well below levels of past runs on the dollar.

The dollar nose-dived to its lowest postwar rate at the Frankfurt foreign exchange when the central bank raised the discount rate to seven from six per cent.

Other European exchanges reported strong gains at the dollar's expense.

Gold futures on the Winnipeg Commodity Exchange were up the $5 limit this morning and trading at record prices.

All months but July, 1973, opened in a good trade as confidence in the U.S. dollar weakened on European markets.

Pressure on the dollar sent prices tumbling on Wall Street. The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks closed at 908.86, down 16.71.

European analysts said the Watergate affair still played a part in undermining confidence in the U.S. currency, but also pointed out that a number of other factors were affecting individual markets.

In Paris, the dollar hit a new low of 4.3850 commercial francs, down from 4.4062 Tuesday. Dealers there said uncertainties over the summit meeting in Iceland Thursday and Pomicopid affected Paris markets.

In Frankfurt, the dollar dropped to 2.7340 marks from 2.7390 marks Tuesday. A special factor there, however, was speculation that banks would be announcing higher lending rates.

This could attract sensitive short-term funds and strengthen the mark against the dollar.

One factor mentioned by dealers in London was the sharply rising cost of petroleum imported into the United States.

The higher prices could eventually weaken the U.S. balance-of-payments position and drag down the dollar.

In Zurich, the dollar weakened from 3.1105 Swiss francs late Tuesday to 3.0970 Swiss francs today.

In London, the pound improved from 2.5555 dollars to 2.5587 dollars.

Fish Deal Bought A Year—Davis

By IAIN HUNTER
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Fisheries Minister Jack Davis said Tuesday that the 11-month reciprocal fishing agreement signed with the U.S. Friday means that both countries have "bought a year in which to sort out our differences."

Although the Pacific Trollers Association has criticized the agreement, Davis said that the alternative would have been far worse.

"It would have been much worse if the Americans had pushed us out of their waters and we had pushed them out of ours, forcing both of us to fish within our own lines," he said in an interview.

He described the present situation as "free trade with the United States, on fish," and added that while the Americans were trying to tear up the existing reciprocal arrangement, Canada succeeded in retaining it for another year.

Pacific Trollers Association president Joe Garcia had said that under the new agreement, which runs from June 15 of this year to April 24, 1974, Canadian trollers would suffer a net loss of $30,000 a year, compared to the net loss to U.S. trollers of $48,000 a year.

But Davis stated that while Canadian boats no longer will be able to fish off half the Washington State coast, U.S. fishermen have been pushed off the Vancouver Island West Coast.

The minister said halibut fishermen around Prince Rupert should be happy "that we obtained this respite."

'DRUG RAID' NETS $27

VANCOUVER (CP) — Three persons staging a mock drug arrest robbed a pensioner of $27 Tuesday.

Joseph Tremblay told police a young girl about 16 knocked on his door and asked to use the washroom. After he let her in two men identifying themselves as police officers knocked on the door.

Tremblay said the men, who showed him a badge and a pair of handcuffs, searched the girl and appeared to find some drugs on her. He said they also searched the room as well as his wallet.

Tremblay later found the $27 was missing.

MPs Approve New Noose Ban

OTTAWA (CP) — In a tense vote Tuesday night the Commons gave second reading, approval in principle, to legislation that would extend the partial ban on the death penalty for another five years.

The 138-to-114 vote, wider than many expected, left opponents of the death penalty jubilant and prompted Solicitor-General Warren Allmand to announce that the government may ask Parliament to abolish the death penalty.

"There's a point of view that if we did something to tighten up parole the House would be ready to consider complete abolition," he said after the vote was taken.

"I'm not saying we are definitely going to do it because we haven't made any decision."

The legislation, restricting the death penalty to murderers of on-duty policemen and prison guards, would renew an initial five-year ban that expired Dec. 29.

The bill now goes to the Commons justice and legal affairs committee where several members have announced they will attempt to have it amended.

Marcel Prud'homme (L—Montreal St. Denis) and Jim Fleming (L—York West) say they will seek abolition with a 25-year minimum sentence for all first-degree murderers.

Others say they will press for abolition under the current parole regulations, which allow convicted murderers to apply for release after 10 years.

The noisy vote, taken with galleries packed, followed 11 days of debate spread over more than four months. It was a free vote without the normal political restraints of party allegiance and led to a split in all parties but Social Credit.

Eighty-four Liberals, 25 Conservatives and 29 New Democrats voted for the bill, including Vancouver Island NDP members Tommy Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan Islands) and Tom Barnett (Comox-Alberni); 21 Liberals, 77 Conservatives, one new Democrat, 14 Socials and Roch La Salle (Ind.—Joliette) voted against, including Victoria's two PC members, Allan McKinnon and Donald Munro.

Eleven MPs, excluding Speaker Lucien Lanouereux who did not vote, were absent or did not rise when the vote was taken. They were four Liberals, five Conservatives, one New Democrat and one Social Credit.

Prominent members voting in favor included Prime Minister Trudeau and his full cabinet except absent Science Minister Jeanne Sauvé, Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield, NDP Leader David Lewis and former prime minister John Diefenbaker. Social Credit Leader Real Caouette was the only party chief to vote against the bill.
